Supreme Court upholds legality of abortion right

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court today refused to review an appeal of a decision which struck down New Jersey's 1947 abortion law as an invasion of a woman's privacy and unconstitutionally vague.

Since it ruled last year that women and their doctors have a right to decide on an abortion in the first trimester of pregnancy, the court has declined to hear any abortion cases.

Before the Supreme Court's last decision on abortion, a three-judge district court had declared that the New Jersey abortion statute "is unconstitutionally vague on its face as applied" because it "chills and deters the plaintiff-physicians in the exercise of protected First Amendment activities and...it violates plaintiff-physicians rights under the 14th Amendment to freely practice the profession of their choice."

In other action today, the court:

—Declined to hear an Arkansas case in which police officers posing as gamblers intercepted telephone calls without a specific warrant.

—Reversed the contempt conviction of a courtroom witness in Oklahoma because he had not been warned once before being cited for using profanity.

—Agreed to review an antitrust ruling against Gulf Oil Co. for allegedly trying to monopolize the asphalt industry in Southern California.

—Denied an appeal by a Pennsylvania state police captain dismissed at age 60 even though he was "physically and mentally competent to continue to perform his duties."

New Jersey's abortion law provided that "any person who, maliciously or without lawful justification" performed an abortion was guilty of a high misdemeanor. Should the mother or child die, the abortionist was subject to a $5,000 fine and 15 years in prison.

The federal court ruled that the term "without lawful justification" was so vague that physicians could not even determine whether they were breaking the law if they performed surgery to save a woman's life or in the belief they were operating properly under medical ethics.

The case was brought by nine physicians, including two whose licenses had been revoked because they were convicted of violating the abortion law. Several women's groups and non-pregnant women also sought to overturn the law, but the federal court said they had no standing to sue.

The three-judge court reconsidered its decision after the Supreme Court's landmark abortion decisions and sustained its original judgment.

AIRPLANES COLLIDE

A Cessna 140, left, piloted by Raymond Tarnowski of Temple City, crashed during landing at Cable Airport in Upland Sunday. The plane's landing gear apparently collapsed as the aircraft touched down, causing it to swerve off the runway and into a home-made plane parked on the south side of the airfield. Tarnowski, a student pilot at Cable Air Inc., was alone in the plane and escaped injury.

2 family feuds end in stabbing and shooting

La Verne woman is hospitalized with knife wounds

LA VERNE — A 34-year-old woman was stabbed three times during a quarrel with her husband here Sunday night at their apartment at 1957 Evergreen Ave., police reported.

The victim, Linda Frances Miller, was reported in serious condition after surgery today in Pomona Valley Community Hospital. Mrs. Miller had been stabbed twice in the stomach and once in the middle of her back authorities said.

Police were seeking Mrs. Miller's husband, 34-year-old Larry L. Miller, in connection with the stabbing.

They said they were summoned to the apartment complex shortly before 8 o'clock by neighbors who heard quarreling. They said they were told that Miller was seen chasing Mrs. Miller, bleeding from the stomach wounds, down a stairway, as she yelled for help. They said residents told them that during the pursuit, Miller was shouting that she "deserved it."

Police said a witness told them that Miller returned to the apartment briefly, came out and again stabbed the victim before leaving in a car.

Officers reported finding two knives believed to have been used in the attack. One was a 5-inch steak knife and the other a 7-inch butcher knife.

Mrs. Miller's two children were not home at the time of the incident. They were being cared for by friends today, authorities said.

Man arrested after seven shots fired into Chino house

CHINO — A housewarming party at 12505 Baker St. was interrupted briefly Sunday morning when about seven shots were fired into the house. A woman was hit in the leg, and a man cut in the arm by flying glass.

Booked on a charge of assault with intent to commit murder was John Thomas Duke of Alhambra.

Duke drove away in his pickup truck and returned to the house just as police units were arriving, officers reported.

Police reported that Duke and his wife had an argument at the party. Duke went out to his pickup parked in front of the house, got out his .22 caliber rifle, and reportedly fired about seven shots at the house.

Mrs. Carmen Lopez of Montebello was struck in the leg and taken by ambulance to Chino General Hospital for emergency treatment. She told officers she would see her doctor for further treatment.

Standing near a front-room window during the shooting was Daniel Mullen of Covina. Mullen was cut by flying glass and treated at the hospital and released.

Police expect Duke's arraignment sometime Tuesday at Chino Municipal Court.

Officers said they only knew the name of the newly arrived family holding the party as "Ortiz."

Showers may visit; rest of week uncertain

A storm that brought rain to areas of Northern California this morning may leave showers in passing through here tonight and Tuesday morning.

Today will be the start of unsettled weather conditions that will remain throughout most of the week and may result in a new storm Wednesday or Thursday, according to the forecaster at the National Weather Service.

The weather will be cloudy and cool with the chance of light rain tonight or early Tuesday. Tuesday's high will be 68 degrees after a nighttime low in the low 50s.

Today's cloudy weather followed a sunny and pleasant Sunday afternoon. The Cal Poly weather station reported a high temperature Sunday of 67 degrees and a low this morning of 49 degrees.

Saudis link embargo to U.S. peace moves

BEIRUT (UPI) — Saudi Arabia has informed Syria that it will re-impose the embargo on oil supplies to the United States if there is a slowdown in American efforts to achieve a Middle East settlement, the Beirut newspaper Al Bayraq said today.

Deputies found John outside the house and took him to safety. Then they made telephone contact with the younger Charlebois and persuaded him to release his mother and father.

Sgt. Richard Lemon spoke with Charlebois on and off for more than four hours by telephone. He was the one who ultimately persuaded the man to throw out the rifle and leave the house, Lemon said.

Deputies said they could obtain no clear-cut reason for Charlebois' behavior.

Deputies said Charlebois had been drinking and was emotionally upset and unstable. Lemon said the man told

Thousands show up in rain for Hearst food giveaway

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Thousands of persons turned out in heavy rain today to pick up boxes that contained steaks and fresh produce in the resumption of the food giveaway program demanded by the terrorist kidnappers of Patricia Hearst.

Although the distribution at 17 San Francisco area locations was scheduled to start at 8 a.m., many persons got in line hours early despite the downpour.

Operators of the "People In Need" program sponsored by Patricia's father, Randolph A. Hearst, said the giveaway was intended to come as close as possible to the $70 worth of free groceries for every needy Californian demanded by the Symbionese Liberation Army which kidnapped the girl Feb. 4.

A typical box distributed at a center in the predominantly Latin-American Mission district of San Francisco included four or five steaks, some of them T-bone cuts, two packages of frozen fillet of sole, a frozen chicken, a dozen eggs, a quart of milk, a jar of peanut butter, a package of fresh produce that included yams, onions, oranges, apples and bananas, and other foodstuffs.

The line at the Mission district distribution center stretched for more than two blocks with about 400-500 persons waiting at 8 a.m. Because of the crowd, the center began handing out the food early. There were no restrictions on how many boxes could be taken by one person and a number had more than one.

One man wheeled two of the food boxes away in a wheelchair, and another had a box on his shoulder while limping along on one crutch.

Although they had been asked by PIN officials to bring shopping carts, a number of persons turned up in automobiles, some of them Cadillacs.

One woman left balancing a box on her head. Several boxes were being loaded into the same automobile. No one appeared cheerful.

"I've been waiting in the rain since six o'clock," one man said.

The distribution was possibly the last under the People In Need program. Spokesmen for PIN said they had about $1 million left to devote to the program and that it all might be spent today.

The latest distribution was the fifth since Patricia was kidnapped seven weeks ago and the SLA demanded the distribution as a "good faith gesture." It took place at 17 outlets throughout the San Francisco Bay Area.

"Bring shopping carts of something to carry the food," Kramer said.

He said the program "now has a quality food to distribute," thus meeting a major complaint of the Symbionese Liberation Army which kidnapped Patricia, 20, from near the University of California at Berkeley where she is enrolled as a coed.

The food program is financed by Randolph Hearst, president and editor of the San Francisco Examiner, in an effort to finally free his daughter who was abducted Feb. 4.

After the kidnapping, the SLA demanded Hearst give $70 worth of food to all California's poor, even before negotiations for his daughter's release could begin.

But the giveaway as originally set up came to an abrupt halt two weeks ago after the SLA kidnappers labeled it only "crumbs" for the people. They termed some of the free food as "hog feed" and "unfit for human consumption."

Arms limitation, detente among issues of parley

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev opened talks today with U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and expressed hope of reaching a new strategic arms limitation (SALT) agreement this year.

The Communist Party general secretary made the comment to newsmen just before a three-hour meeting at the Kremlin with Kissinger.

Kissinger later said both sides are determined to overcome obstacles to better Soviet-American relations, including domestic criticism in the United States to the effect that detente is working to Soviet advantage.

"This period of cooperation, of dealing with each other cooperatively and fairly, which was started two years ago, has gained in strength and will continue," Kissinger told a luncheon given by Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

Kissinger said obstacles to this cooperation arise but, "We are determined to remove them. Occasionally we find domestic criticism, but we are determined to overcome it."

Kissinger said that the greatest goal of the Nixon administration is that "over the next three years we can make the relationship that has grown up between our two peoples irreversible."

The Kissinger visit is expected to pave the way for a Russian visit by President Nixon. While agreement on a new arms limitation agreement will be the main issue in the three days of talks, other problems include differences on trade and the Middle East.

Demo group asks tax cut of $10 billion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Democrats on the Congressional Joint Economic Committee today called for a $10 billion tax cut to stave the economy out of what they said was a recession, but Republicans said it would be inflationary and ill-advised.

The suggestions came in the group's annual report on the President's economic policy and suggestions to the Congress.

Chairman Wright Patman, D-Tex., speaking for the Democratic majority, accused the administration of a policy that "ignores the problem of inflation..."

He said that unless steps were taken quickly to halt recession, "unemployment is likely to exceed 6 per cent throughout the second half of this year."

Nixon given more time to answer charge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon today was given four more days to answer Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski's subpoena for more Watergate materials.

Jaworski said he was extending the deadline to Friday on the request of James D. St. Clair, Nixon's Watergate attorney, who wanted more time to study the subpoena.

Jaworski filed the subpoena March 15. Neither he nor the White House would say what materials Jaworski asked for. In extending the deadline, Jaworski said, he also was reemphasizing the need for the materials.

Asked why St. Clair sought the delay, White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler said he did not have the details of the discussion between Jaworski and St. Clair.

Ziegler also said he did not know if St. Clair has discussed the subpoena with Nixon.

Barricaded Claremonter gives up

CLAREMONT — A 27-year-old man held sheriff's deputies off for several hours near here early today, after arming and barricading himself in his parents' home at 4246 Oak Hollow Road, authorities said.

But shortly after 4 a.m. the man, George James Charlebois, tossed a .22-caliber version of an M-16 military rifle out the front door, walked out and sat on the front steps of the encircled house. Deputies took him into custody after taking a butcher knife from him, they said.

During the standoff, Charlebois fired one shot in the direction of officers, deputies said. Deputy Victor Vinson said the bullet passed over his head as he stood outside the kitchen of the Charlebois residence. The shot, Vinson said, apparently was in the response to the sound of a round being chambered in the weapon of a member of the sheriff's special weapons team which had been sent to the location.

Sheriff's deputies gave this account: The incident began when the suspect called the telephone operator, saying he was holding his father, Dr. George James Charlebois, 55, mother, Jayne, 51, and brother, John, 15, hostage in the house.

Dr. Charlebois, a Claremont veterinarian, is recovering after a recent stroke.

Deputies found John outside the house and took him to safety. Then they made telephone contact with the younger Charlebois and persuaded him to release his mother and father.

Sgt. Richard Lemon spoke with Charlebois on and off for more than four hours by telephone. He was the one who ultimately persuaded the man to throw out the rifle and leave the house, Lemon said.

Deputies said they could obtain no clear-cut reason for Charlebois' behavior.

Deputies said Charlebois had been drinking and was emotionally upset and unstable. Lemon said the man told him on the telephone that he felt "the world is coming down around me."

At least 20 sheriff's department officers, including the special team wearing helmets and flak jackets, were involved in the incident in addition to an ambulance crew, firemen and a fire department rescue team.

Deputies said there were four shots fired inside the house, by Charlebois, in addition to the one which passed over Vinson. They said they fired no shots and there were no injuries.

After being arrested on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon, Charlebois was taken to the psychiatric ward of County-USC Medical Center for observation, deputies said.

N. Korea asks peace with U.S.

TOKYO (UPI) — North Korea asked the United States today to begin negotiations on a four-point peace settlement of the 1950-53 Korean war. It said South Korea would be excluded from the talks.

"We formally propose to the United States of America to discuss the question of replacing the existing military armistice agreement with a peace agreement," said North Korean Foreign Minister Ho Dam.

Ho's proposal was endorsed by the Supreme People's Assembly, the North Korean Parliament. It also approved the next of a letter requesting peace talks to be sent to the U.S. Congress.

The North Korean foreign minister's proposal was broadcast by North Korea's official KCNA news agency Monday and monitored in Tokyo.

Ho put forward a four-point peace proposal appeared to have little chance of adoption by the United States because they called for withdrawal of American military forces from Korea and for an end of the United Nations' sponsorship of U.S. troops stationed in South Korea.

U.S. Defense Secretary James

Schlesinger said recently the 40,000 U.S. servicemen now stationed in South Korea will remain there for the time being. The United States also is in the midst of a five-year program for re-equipping the South Korean armed forces.

Ho's proposals were:

—The United States and North Korea should exchange mutual pledges of non-aggression and America should stop assisting South Korea. The future of the country would be left to the Koreans.

—Importation of arms and war supplies into Korea should be stopped.

—The United Nations designation should be taken away from American troops in Korea and they should leave South Korea as soon as possible.

—After American troops are withdrawn, no foreign country should have military bases in Korea.

The United States and South Korea fought a standoff war with North Korea and China for control of the Korean peninsula in 1950-53. The fighting ended in July, 1953, in what has been called "the world's longest armistice."

North and South Korea remained divided roughly along the 38th Parallel, as they were before the start of the war.

"The question of signing a peace agreement must be solved directly with the United States," Ho said. "The United States is the party concerned, which has its troops stationed in South Korea. It holds the whole supreme command of the armed forces, and signed the armistice agreement."

"The whole course of the dialogue between the North and the South showed that tension cannot be removed nor can peace be consolidated in Korea as long as the U.S. troops remain in South Korea," Ho said.

"The South Korean authorities have neither the intention nor the capacity to solve this question."

Syrian, Israeli gunners duel in Golan Heights

By United Press International

Syrian gunners pounded Israeli positions in the Golan Heights for the 14th consecutive day Sunday. Egyptian diplomatic sources said there must be disengagement in the Heights before there can be further withdrawals in Siani.

They said Egypt believed that the current Middle East peace efforts of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger could result in a Syrian-Israeli accord by late April or early May, setting the stage for the Sinai talks and a second Israeli troop pullback there.

A Syrian communique said Arab gunners scored direct hits on an Israeli observation post at Tel Al Faras in the southern sector of the Golan Heights Sunday, destroyed an engineering unit and killed or wounded "a number" of Israeli troops.

An Israeli communique said there were no casualties in the 30-minute barrage which began at midday and that Israeli gunners did not return the fire.

It was the 14th consecutive day of fighting along the bulge of Syrian territory held by the Israelis five months after a United Nations cease-fire ended the Middle East war on Oct. 24. Since then, three Israelis have been killed and 11 others wounded in the Artillery outbursts. Syria has not reported its casualties.

"It's worse than the last (1967) war," said Alex, a 20-year-old Israeli artillery gunner from Petah Tikva. "Then in two weeks it was finished. Now it's every day and who knows how long it's going to last."

In a message Sunday to an Afro-Asian peoples conference in Baghdad, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said Egypt is not prepared to conclude a separate peace settlement with Israel, give up one inch of occupied Arab lands or bargain with the rights of the Palestinians.

"The Egyptian army," he said, "will remain on the alert until Israel withdraws from all occupied Arab lands and until we realize all our just and legitimate demands."

Diplomatic sources in Cairo said U.N. supervised talks between Egypt and Israel over troop separations in the Sinai could begin this summer provided there is a disengagement in the Golan Heights where Israel holds positions only 27 miles from Damascus must come first.

A U.N. spokesman in Jerusalem said its observers planned to conduct a field check Tuesday of Israeli charges that Egypt has placed more heavy artillery on the east bank of Suez canal than allowed by the Suez disengagement agreement.

The Israeli newspapers Yediot and Maariv said Kissinger has received assurances from Cairo that the cannons would be removed soon to comply with the disengagement accord Kissinger arranged last January.

In Cairo, the newspaper Al Ahram said King Hussein of Jordan, who until now has claimed to represent the Palestinians of the Israeli-occupied west bank, is ready to recognize the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) as the "sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people." The PLO includes all the major Palestinian people. The PLO includes all the Palestinian guerrilla groups.

Quake hits India capital of Bihar

NEW DELHI (UPI) — A mild earthquake struck the capital of the riot-scarred Indian state of Bihar Sunday, causing panicky residents to ignore curfews and flee into the streets.

The Press Trust of India (PTI) said the quake was minor, lasting only a few seconds. PTI made no mention of casualties or damage.

The tremor rocked Patna, capital of troubled Bihar, and Muzaffarpur, 40 miles to the north of Patna. Patna is about 600 miles southeast of New Delhi.

Patna and several other Bihar cities and towns were hit by anti-government riots last week in which 22 persons fell to police bullets.

State authorities clamped curfews on the disturbed areas but Patna residents ignored the curfew there and rushed into the streets in panic when the quake hit.

PTU said the quake struck Muzaffarpur for about 10 seconds, rattling windows and doors of houses and buildings.

Patna, Muzaffarpur and several other northeastern Bihar towns were hit by a devastating earthquake in January, 1934, that left an estimated 20,000 persons dead.

Death of Stalin

RACINE, Wis. (UPI) — Russian author Alexander Solzhenitsyn would have been put to death during Josef Stalin's rule in the Soviet Union, according to Soviet expert Henry Shapiro.

"He would have been killed in five seconds in the Stalin era," Shapiro said. "It would have been inconceivable for a man to be having press conferences and criticizing the government."

A CORDIAL START

Leonid I. Brezhnev, left, Soviet Communist party secretary, and Henry Kissinger, U.S. secretary of state, were all smiles when they met today in Moscow.

Kissinger's trip is to pave the way for a Russian visit by President Nixon. Helmut Sonnenfeldt of the U.S. State Department is in background.

No real U.S.-Russian detente--Chou En-lai

HONG KONG (UPI) — Chinese Premier Chou En-lai, in a speech that coincided with the visit to Moscow by U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, said Sunday night there can be no real detente between the United States and the Soviet Union.

"The two superpowers at times talk about detente," he said, "but in actuality they are engaged in an intense rivalry."

"This rivalry is rooted in a struggle to seize world hegemony," he added.

Chou's remarks were made in a speech delivered at a welcome banquet he gave in Peking's Great Hall of the People for President Julius K. Nyerere of Tanzania. Nyerere arrived in Peking Sunday morning on his third visit to China.

Chou devoted a considerable portion of his remarks to Soviet-American relations. He did not mention either country specifically by name nor did he refer to Kissinger's current visit to Russia. But diplomatic analysts specializing in Chinese affairs said his remarks obviously were connected with the Kissinger visit.

The world situation, Chou said, is characterized "by universal great disorder" and this is "unfavorable...to the two superpowers which are contending with each other in a vain attempt to seize world hegemony."

"Strategically, Europe is the focus of their contention," he added. But "everywhere they are fiercely contending with each other...from the Mediterranean to the Arab world, the Middle East, the Indian Ocean."

Chou's speech was marked by two unusual features, according to analysts here. It was more militant than usual, dwelling more on the theme of violent revolutionary struggle. It also made no reference to the mass political campaign now under way in China, centering around criticism of the ancient sage Confucius and the late Defense Minister Lin Biao. He has mentioned the campaign in recent speeches for visiting leaders.

Chou quoted Chinese Communist party Chairman Mao Tsetung's dictum that "people want revolution" and said armed revolutionary struggles "continue to develop in depth" in Africa.

China, he said, had a "duty to sympathize with and support" such struggles.

"How can a Communist party or a socialist country be worthy of its name if it does not support the people's revolutionary struggles. We will, as always, firmly support the revolutionary struggles of all oppressed peoples and all oppressed nations. This principled stand of the Chinese people will never change."

In his response, Nyerere said he was impressed by China's progress, but even more impressive was the Chinese dissatisfaction with the pace of progress.

Nyerere also thanked the Chinese for their aid, particularly the building of the Zambian-Tanzanian railway, which he predicted would be completed ahead of the 1976 target date.

Farmers to get additional 220 million gallons of gas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The assistant administrator of the Federal Energy Office (FEO) pledged today farmers will get an additional 220 million gallons of gasoline this year to plant an additional 10 million acres of land in grain and other crops.

The official, Duke R. Ligon, told a Senate Agriculture subcommittee studying farm fuel problems that "the increased acreage will be very important to consumers in this country and to the administration's efforts to curb inflationary trends."

He said in a prepared statement that while agriculture already is entitled under FEO rules to 100 percent of current fuel needs, the end of the Arab oil embargo will help farmers by easing potential fuel dislocations and assuring adequate supplies for food processors and haulers.

Ligon also told the senators his agency is "particularly concerned" with the problem of getting gasoline for migrant farm workers who travel across the country harvesting crops. Some migrants have said they will stay home this season unless assured of gasoline.

Ligon said "any shortage of available gasoline supplies would cause considerable hardship for migrant labor and could result in a reduction of essential crops for the market."

He said the FEO is considering setting up "telephone hotline systems" to tell migrant workers where they can get gasoline. The agency also is arranging for its regional offices to respond quickly to workers' emergency needs, he said.

Nicholas H. Smith, head of the Agriculture Department's energy office, said farm gasoline was tight to very tight in 30 states last week compared with 26 states the week before. Diesel fuel was short in 16 states compared with 13 states the previous week.

Smith predicted some spot shortages but said the general outlook for farm fuel supplies "appears to be good. We are quite optimistic that supplies of Diesel fuel will be adequate to meet our farmers' needs. Gasoline supplies may be a little tighter."

British oil firm rejects German cartel charges

BERLIN (UPI) — The West German subsidiary of British Petroleum today rejected charges that it had engaged in unfair trade practices to reap huge profits in the wake of the oil crisis.

In an open hearing before the Federal Cartel Office in Berlin, a company spokesman said the firm did not control enough of the German market to be legally subject to the unfair trade charges.

"The abuse could only have taken place if it could be proven that the company had a dominant market position," a BP spokesman told the hearing.

Five oil companies—Aral, Esso, Shell, Texaco and BP—control 74 percent of the oil market in Germany, and thus collectively are subject to German monopoly restriction laws.

Unlikely Arabs to reimpose embargo

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Because a unanimous vote is needed, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger says he doesn't believe the Mideast oil embargo will be reimposed when the Arab states meet later this spring to reassess the situation.

that have cooled the detente between the two powers.

Both men were in an expansive, bantering mood when they entered the Kremlin room where the Soviet Politburo meets every Thursday.

Asked about the prospects for a SALT agreement this year, the target date set by Nixon, Brezhnev replied: "I take an optimistic view on that. We have made a very good beginning on that process. The further we proceed from the date (of the first SALT agreement in 1972), people will really appreciate the importance of that significant step."

"That document speaks of peace and good neighborliness because the only other alternative is war. There is no other alternative."

When Kissinger entered the room a moment later, Brezhnev told him he had been talking to the press. "I told them I was optimistic and they agreed with me that all want peace. That makes it easier to start."

Brezhnev also expressed the opinion that "relations at this point (with the United States) are good. There is much work to do at this time."

"You do want it better, don't you?" a newsman asked.

"There are such people who would like to see things worse," Brezhnev replied.

Kissinger arrived Sunday night for an expected three days of talks with Brezhnev and other Soviet officials. The major issue before them is the SALT negotiations that are now stalemated in Geneva.

Kissinger said he also would discuss the controversy in the United States over trade with the Soviet Union and his Middle East diplomacy.

Brezhnev complained in his talk with newsman that the European security conference at Geneva is "dragging its feet a little."

"There are opponents of detente who keep introducing petty matters that have no bearing on detente," he said.

Lawyers won't appeal ruling in Watergate case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lawyers for two Watergate defendants say they will not appeal to the Supreme Court today a decision giving the House Judiciary Committee a secret grand jury report on President Nixon's handling of the scandal.

The lawyers for H.R. Haldeman and Gordon Strachan said Sunday "We figure that we've made our point," and thus plan to let a 5 p.m. EDT deadline pass for taking a U.S. Appeals Court decision to the Supreme Court.

Nixon's lawyers had not objected to the committee getting the secret report for its impeachment inquiry, but John J. Wilson and John Bray—lawyers for Haldeman and Strachan—contended that its transmittal to Capitol Hill would result in news leaks that would preclude their clients getting a fair trial.

"We're through," said Wilson, who had indicated after the Appeals Court verdict that he was disinclined to go to the highest court.

The lawyers' decision meant the committee would get the report, probably sometime today. It consists of a two-page index and a "bulging briefcase" presumably filled with materials dealing with Nixon that the grand jury collected in its exhaustive 18-month investigation of Watergate.

Schools ordered open in Missouri

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Citing legal, technical and moral reasons, school superintendent Robert Medcalf ordered the city's 98 schools open today for 62,000 students.

Medcalf and the school board decided to keep classrooms operating despite the walkout a week ago by more than 80 per cent of the city's 2,600 teachers in a wage contract dispute. The board obtained a court order to force an end to the walkout, illegal under Missouri law.

Medcalf's announcement Sunday night touched off chants of "Hell no, We won't go" at a teacher's rally in a nearby hotel. They also sang "We Shall Overcome."

"The decision to open the schools is not an easy one," Medcalf said. "Paramount in our minds is the health and safety of all our children and the welfare of our professional and dedicated staff members."

Medcalf declined to elaborate on reasons cited for keeping schools open. He also would not comment on the progress of preliminary talks with teachers aimed at resuming full scale contract negotiations.

A few blocks away from the Board of Education building, hundreds of teachers gathered at the hotel to dramatize their determination to stay on strike and defy the court order issued last week by Jackson County Judge Alvin C. Randall. He has scheduled a show cause hearing Wednesday.

Norman Hudson, president of American Federation of Teachers Local 691, read teachers the court order and repeated his pledge to fight it.

"I'm only reading this because the court order requires me to," Hudson said.

Hudson attributed a break in preliminary talks with the school board to "a lack of contact" from administrators. Hudson also termed as "highly inflammatory" a call by Kansas City Mayor Charles Wheeler for the teachers to go back to their jobs.

San Francisco teachers strike

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — San Francisco's two major teachers' unions struck the public schools today, but administration spokesmen said they hoped to keep classes going with substitute teachers and supervisory personnel.

The strike, by the American Federation of Teachers and the Classroom Teachers Association, was expected to keep more than 80 per cent of the city's 4,300 teachers out of classes.

"We are on strike because the school board refused to negotiate with us over the weekend," said a spokesman for the CTA. "San Francisco's children and teachers are being used as pawns."

The AFT has been on strike for more than two weeks, but it was only joined today by the CTA. Up to now, schools had remained open with about 70 per cent of the teachers in class and about half of the city's 76,000 students.

A smaller teachers' organization, the Teachers Association of San Francisco, said its 400 members would honor the picket lines.

FBI recovers most of ransom money

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The FBI announced that it had recovered about $190,000 of the $200,000 ransom paid the kidnapers who abducted Mrs. Eunice Kronholm, wife of a South St. Paul, Minn., banker.

Postponed hearings slated in San Dimas

SAN DIMAS — Residents who have been unable to testify at two recent public hearings because of postponements will have their say tonight when the zone change matter comes before the City Council once more.

About 40 residents from an area in the northeast section of the city have attended recent meetings of the council to testify about a proposed 300-unit housing development.

The development would be constructed on two parcels on the north and south sides of the Foothill Freeway that totals 39 acres.

The two parcels lie between Walnut Avenue and San Dimas Canyon Road and are owned by the Namimatsu Farms, Inc.

The applicant for the zone change from agricultural to residential planned development is Leadership Housing Systems, Inc.

Governor candidates are ignoring forum

AZUSA — The five leading candidates in the gubernatorial race have thus far ignored invitations to a candidate's forum that will be sponsored Friday at Citrus College by the League of Women Voters.

The league invited 10 of the major candidates but only five, all Democrats, have accepted. Those accepting include Claremont attorney Herb Hafif, William Roth of Los Angeles, Congressman Jerome Waldie of Antioch, Los Angeles County Supervisor Baxter Ward, and State Sen. James Wedworth of Los Angeles.

League members are awaiting word from Mayor Joseph Alioto of San Francisco, Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. and Assembly Speaker Robert Moretti, all Democrats, and Republicans Houston Flournoy and Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke.

The forum is co-sponsored by the college and the League of Women Voters of Alhambra, Arcadia, Claremont, East San Gabriel Valley, Glendora, Monrovia, Pasadena and South Pasadena.

Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles and mayors of area cities in the San Gabriel and Pomona valleys have been invited to attend.

Each candidate will be given 10 minutes to present his platform before answering questions from the audience.

Man's back injured in fall in canyon

AZUSA — A Glendora man suffered a spinal injury Sunday in a fall in the Soldier Creek area of San Gabriel Canyon, about a mile west of Highway 39.

A team of mountaineers from the San Dimas sheriff's station trekked into the canyon and carried Larry R. Butler, 25, to a location where he could be loaded into a helicopter. The victim then was flown to Arcadia Methodist Hospital where his condition today was termed fair.

In another such accident, George R. Tallman's condition today had improved somewhat at Glendora Community Hospital after a fall Saturday night in the East Fork of San Gabriel Canyon, also near Highway 38. Tallman, who suffered internal injuries, was reported in improved "but serious condition" today.

ONTARIO — An Ontario woman is in fair condition today at San Antonio Community Hospital with injuries suffered Sunday night when her car was hit from the rear at the Mountain Avenue off-ramp of the San Bernardino Freeway.

Ruth Elaine Galbreath, 50, of 904 W. Flora St., suffered injuries to her neck and nose in the accident.

According to highway patrol officers, Mrs. Galbreath was on the westbound offramp at Mountain Avenue waiting for traffic in front of her to clear. Her car was hit from the rear by a vehicle driven by Charles Thomas Rose, 35, of 1805 Elderberry Ave., Ontario.

Rose escaped injury, but was arrested on a drunken driving charge.

Kenneth Leroy Barnes, 40, of 1192 Citrus Drive, La Habra, told highway patrol officers that he had just left the truck to make a delivery when he glanced back and saw it rolling down the street.

Barnes ran after the truck but was knocked down when he tried to jump inside. He injured the back of his head and was taken by ambulance to Pomona Valley Community Hospital where he was treated and released.

Rattles & straws California, there I go!

By JOSEPH FIRMAN

THE CALIFORNIANS ARE COMING! THE CALIFORNIANS ARE COMING!

From Spokane, Wash., to San Antonio, Tex., the word is out, the alarm bells ringing, the warning flags snapping from flagpoles at real estate firms, loan offices and police stations. The residents of California, fed up with smog, water pollution, crime in the street, the San Andreas Fault and Gov. Reagan, are leaving the Golden State like rats deserting a sinking ship.

Demographic experts, major moving companies, state population analysts and even some people who know what they're talking about agree that there is a new migration out of California. One moving firm alone took almost 16,000 families out of California last year.

Most of these expatriates head for Washington and Oregon, Idaho and Texas, seeking greener pastures and less crowded freeways. It's the Gold Rush in reverse, and our friendly neighboring states look upon the migration as an invasion of Atilla's Huns. The Huns would be more welcome.

Thundering into quiet Oregon hamlets and sleepy Texas towns comes your typical California family in two detachments. The advance guard is the father, a lean, sun-burned type in long burns, shades and white cowboy boots. He's your man with a shaker of 12-to-1 martinis in the glove compartment and a kilo of marijuana in the tire compartment.

Daddy is followed by Mommy, a beefy bimbo in hair-curlers and slacks, driving the motor home with the four kids, the boat on top, the two Tote-Goats strapped on behind, and towing a trailer carrying the two motorcycles. The Seventh Army went across Northern France with less equipment.

In Oregon or Idaho or Texas, the Californians will make themselves at home, which means they will dump their beer cans on the highway, write obscene graffiti on the rest room walls, and challenge the local highway patrols to a drag down 250 miles of freeways. Even the sheriff's planes can't catch a mustached Californian when he's had a few belts and got his foot on the floor.

When the family settles down in a peaceful Washington suburb or a pleasant Nevada town, the kids will soon make their presence felt. There will be nightly riots at the local hamburger palace, nightly goings-on in the drive-in theater. Windows will be shattered in the schools, communes will blossom in the Puritanical communities. Grange dances will give way to pot parties, and swaggering, bronzed Californians emigrants will hold sway in bars and bowling alleys.

In less time than it takes to default on the equity, the newcomers will find that the pristine, green community into which they have moved has suddenly acquired all the attributes of East Los Angeles, from the hard rock to the dope.

As the chap said, the grass always looks greener in the other fellow's yard.

Uganda's Amin purges army officers

NAIROBI (UPI) — President Idi Amin of Uganda has purged at least 50 army officers following a weekend tribal battle between military units in Kampala, western diplomatic sources said today.

They said the fighting was provoked by Amin trying to purge the army of dissident officers and the officers themselves trying to overthrow the flamboyant former sergeant major and champion boxer.

The sources said the total number of casualties in the battle was probably several hundred.

The sources said Amin late Sunday regained control of the 16,000-man armed forces and immediately began eliminating dissident officers, mainly men belonging to the Lugbara tribe.

The general had already got rid of at least 50 officers, they said, some of them having been killed and their bodies disposed of. Others fled the capital city where troops fought each other during the weekend with tanks and machine guns.

Earlier reports said the coup attempt against Amin was led by Brig. Charles Arube, who had been army chief of staff until he went to Russia for additional training last year. He returned to Uganda from Moscow about a week ago.

The diplomats pieced together the events leading up to the confrontation, the most serious Amin has faced since he came to power in a bloodless coup in January 1971.

They said it began earlier this month when the body of former foreign minister Lt. Col. Michael Ondoga was found floating in the Nile River.

His fellow Lugbara tribesmen in the army later forced their way into one of Amin's homes in Kampala and smashed it up, blaming Amin for Ondoga's death.

The diplomats said Amin Friday began assembling loyal troops to purge some of the 2,000 Lugbara troops from the army.

Almost simultaneously, they said, the dissident officers were planning their own coup attempt over the weekend.

The sources said the president has repeatedly initiated purges with the armed forces, civilian government and intellectual circles since seizing power. They said they expected the current shakeup to continue for several weeks with perhaps hundreds more victims.

GOP volunteers support Reinecke over Flourney

FRESNO (UPI) — The oldest Republican volunteer organization in the state, the California Republican Assembly, gave overwhelming support for Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke's bid for the gubernatorial nomination Sunday.

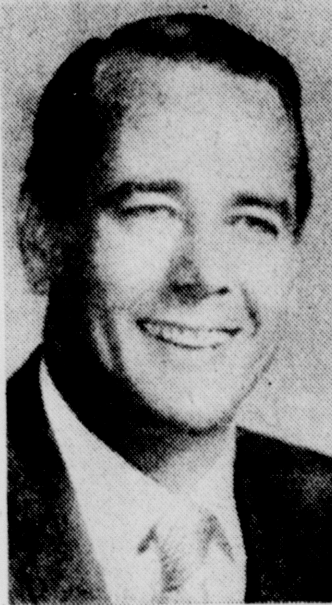

He received 222 votes for the nomination with only 24 against him and six abstentions. State controller Houston Flournoy, regarded as Reinecke's major challenger, expected the outcome as he left the CRA's 41st annual convention 12 hours before the balloting.

He left a statement which was read shortly after the results were made known.

"Despite the CRA's decision to endorse my opponent in the upcoming primary," he said, "I am sure the vast majority of the organization's membership will actively support my campaign after the primary."

The CRA also endorsed State Senator H.L. Richardson of Arcadia for U.S. Senator, State Senator John Harmer for Lieutenant Governor, incumbent Attorney General Evelle J. Younger for re-election and former director of consumer affairs John Kehoe for treasurer.

The required two-thirds vote could not be obtained for a secretary of state candidate so two were endorsed. They are former South Pasadena City Councilman Mike Montgomery and former Corporations Commissioner Brian Van Camp.

The CRA also had to make a dual endorsement for state controller, selecting Los Angeles attorney James Flournoy and Encino college trustee Marian La Follette.

"This clearly indicates the people in the party are confident of my integrity," Reinecke said after the results were announced.

Watergate Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski has been investigating discrepancies between Reinecke and former Attorney General John Mitchell concerning a $400,000 guarantee from International Telephone and Telegraph to defray costs of the 1972 GOP convention. The convention had been scheduled for San Diego but was switched to Miami Beach.

Mitchell has said he did not know about the offer until well after the Justice Department reached settlement with ITT on an anti-trust suit. Reinecke said he told Mitchell about it before the settlement.

Reinecke said the conflict will not cloud his campaign.

"It's a cloud in the minds of those who would like to destroy the campaign," he said. "It is not a cloud in my mind because, as I said, I know very well that everything I did was proper. It was true; it was above board; it was all in the best interest of California."

In announcing the recommendation to endorse Reinecke, believed to be worth about 4,000 campaign volunteers throughout the state, endorsement committee chairman Frank P. Adams of Piedmont said the matter of the candidate's electability was not given great weight.

Princess may testify in kidnaping trial

LONDON (UPI) — Princess Anne might be the first member of the immediate royal family to testify in court in a criminal case in this century if the man who allegedly attempted to kidnap her goes on trial, legal sources said today.

They said the testimony of the daughter of Queen Elizabeth could be vital both to the prosecution and to the defense—to the prosecution as the intended victim who saw it all happen, to the defense in support of a possible plea to a lesser charge than attempted murder.

Only Queen Elizabeth among Britons cannot be summoned in a court case. While this exemption theoretically does not apply to royalty below the sovereign, in practice King Edward VII, as Prince of Wales, was the last member of the immediate blood royal actually to take the stand in court proceedings—a divorce case in 1870 and a notorious baccarat gambling scandal thereafter.

Scotland Yard has charged Ian Ball, 26, a man of many aliases, with the attempted murder of the Princess' bodyguard, detective inspector James Beaton, one of four men gunned down when a royal limousine carrying Anne and her husband, Capt. Mark Phillips, was ambushed near Buckingham Palace Wednesday night.

Ball was held without bail for a week in Magistrate's Court last Thursday to give police time to search, as they said, for possible associates and to examine the source of "large sums" of money in his bank account. He is willing away the time in Brixton prison reading an Agatha Christie murder novel he took from the prison library along with the poems of Thomas Hardy.

If Ball pleads guilty when he is finally arraigned in the famous central criminal court, Old Bailey, there might be no need for what shapes up as one of the more sensational trials of recent years.

Anne's attacker came so close to success that, she told friends, he had her by the arm and was trying to drag her from the maroon Austin limousine while her husband held on to her other arm.

"Go away and we'll forget it," Anne said she told the man.

Anne has not seen her parents since the kidnap attempt.

Queen Elizabeth is studying a police report on security for members of the royal family which includes training for royal drivers to use their cars as battering rams in case of ambush. These drivers would be police or military rather than civilian as was the 55-year-old driver of Anne's car.

The Queen and Prince Philip, back Saturday from a state visit to Indonesia, had planned to watch their daughter and son-in-law compete in horse trials at Cirencester, 100 miles from London, Sunday but did not go. Security sources said local police were worried about the additional security this would entail.

Anne and Phillips had intended after the trials to drive to Windsor castle to see her parents but cancelled the plan because "they were very tired after all the riding," a Buckingham palace spokesman said.

The spokesman said Anne might see her mother today before leaving for a three-day visit to the 14-20th Hussars in West Germany she is Commander-in-Chief of the unit.

First streaking on skis claimed

VERBIER (UPI) — This Swiss winter sports resort claimed a world first today — streaking on skis.

The tourist bureau said six young men and one girl, wearing only their ski boots and skis, streaked down a trail above the resort on Sunday. Another young girl carrying the party's clothes in a sack skied ahead. The group disappeared into a forest to dress after the ski-streak.

"As far as we know the streakers were young Americans," officials said.

Ford vows to quit politics by 1977

NEW YORK (UPI) — Vice President Gerald R. Ford has promised his wife to quit public life no later than 1977, ruling out a run for the Republican presidential nomination, according to an interview in People magazine.

But he left open one way he could be the GOP's 1976 flagbearer—if the nominating convention is hopelessly deadlocked.

Ford said in the interview that his self-imposed retirement deadline stemmed from a bad neck nerve problem his wife had been suffering since 1964, causing numbness in her arm.

"It was tension created by problems of me being away so much and her having to run the family," Ford said.

Because the ailment persisted, Ford said, the couple consulted a psychiatrist who told them the condition could not be eased.

The Fords agreed last year that his race for another term in the House of Representatives would enable him to achieve his goals of 28 years in Congress and retire in 1977, he said.

"She said okay and the kids said okay. If I had been there 28 years, I'd have been 63—which I thought would be young enough so she and I could just go off and really enjoy ourselves for 10 years or more. She wouldn't have any more neck pains and arm pains," Ford was quoted as saying. "I made a real firm commitment not only to her but to the children."

Ford left a slight opening for a draft as the GOP presidential nominee two years from now.

"If you were writing the worst scenario, which I don't think is ever going to happen, for me it would be a Republican convention deadlocked. Reagan, Rockefeller, Connally—anybody else you want—completely deadlocked after a series of votes.

Tree farmer will reduce grove

GRACEHAM, Md. (UPI) — Edgar Emrich vowed Sunday night he will chop down one-third of his pine grove where most of the millions of birds have been roosting each night since December, saying: "The birdlovers and birdwatchers can have their day, today, but those birds won't roost here next year."

The tree farmer favors extermination of the birds, but added this will not be done.

Emrich's statement came after Sunday night's third major bombardment of the huge flock of grackles, red-wing blackbirds and starlings by experts using amplified bird distress calls, fireworks and propane cannon fire in efforts to drive the birds off.

The expert assault, including up to 110 county, state and federal officials as well as Emrich, his neighbors' and citizen volunteers, was launched Friday night as the birds came in to roost after sunset. There was limited success, and the attack was intensified Saturday night — with greater success, although many of the birds driven away from Emrich's grove roosted in groves of trees in nearby communities.

Sunday night's effort began at 7 p.m., until 8:45 p.m., with increased success — "a marked reduction" from Saturday night, Emrich said, but adding that Dr. Kenneth L. Crawford, Maryland state veterinarian and director of the bird-ridding project, warned large numbers might sneak back in during the rest of the night, as they did Saturday night.

Emrich said although he was encouraged by Sunday night's intensified effort he has decided to chop down 15 or 20 acres of the 60-acre pine grove, have the trees shredded, and stumps on the acreage pulled out.

The sector to be cleared is the thickest portion of the grove, and the area where the majority of as many as 10 million birds chose to roost. Emrich raises the pine trees for sale—some of them for commercial use, and the balance sold as Christmas trees. By cutting the trees, he is cutting salable future income since the shredded trees will bring him no financial return — only the expense of cutting them down, and having them disposed of. "But I don't care about that any more," he said, "I just want to get rid of the birds."

Emrich said Sunday night he personally favors an extermination program, a chemical spray which after spraying over the area would destroy the birds. A natural oily protective coating, making them die from exposure to the elements.

However, he said extermination is strongly opposed by ornithologists and he has had telephone calls from "all over the country" from persons urging him not to destroy the birds.

Since extermination is not being pursued, he decided to

Tree farmer will reduce grove

chop down the most troublesome sector of the grove of trees.

WORLD ALMANAC
FACTS

Some 300,000 women were executed as "witches" in Europe between 1484 and 1782. The witchcraft delusion of 1692 at Salem Village, now Danvers, Mass., caused 19 persons to be hanged. Other witchcraft trials were held in America, but only the participants in the Salem delusion confessed their "error" publicly. The World Almanac notes.

Bridge

Bidding since
'35 improved

By Oswald & James Jacoby
Jim: "How about some articles to show how bridge has changed in the last 40 years?"

Oswald: "The Culbertson-Sims match of 1935 might be worth using as an example. Of course, expert 1935 bidding was a trifle better than that of Ely and Jo Culbertson and a lot better than that of Hal and Dorothy Sims. Dorothy had never learned any discipline in bidding and both teams used honor tricks rather than point count for hand evaluation."

Jim: "Here's a hand where Dorothy's lack of discipline paid off. Her club opening was one of those gulpic bids. She had some cards but well below opening strength."

Oswald: "Ely's two club bid was a game force in the Culbertson system. Hal doubled and Jo Culbertson went to two hearts. Dorothy doubled that on the theory that Jo had bid her best suit."

Jim: "I see that Ely jumped to four diamonds and Jo passed. How do you explain that even in 1935 bidding?"

Oswald: "Ely blamed Jo but I blame Ely. If he had just bid three diamonds Jo would have recognized the continuing force and bid. However, when he jumped to four Jo decided that there was something wrong with the whole thing and passed. For the record, Ely made six."

Today's art subject of night class

HACIENDA HEIGHTS — A new art class dealing with contemporary painting styles is conducted Wednesdays from 6:45 to 10:15 p.m. in Room G1 at Los Altos High School.

It is sponsored by the La Puente Community Adult School and taught by Pete Boyer.

"Modern art asks persons to participate, to question and to give quite a bit of themselves," said Boyer. During the day Boyer teaches at the high school.

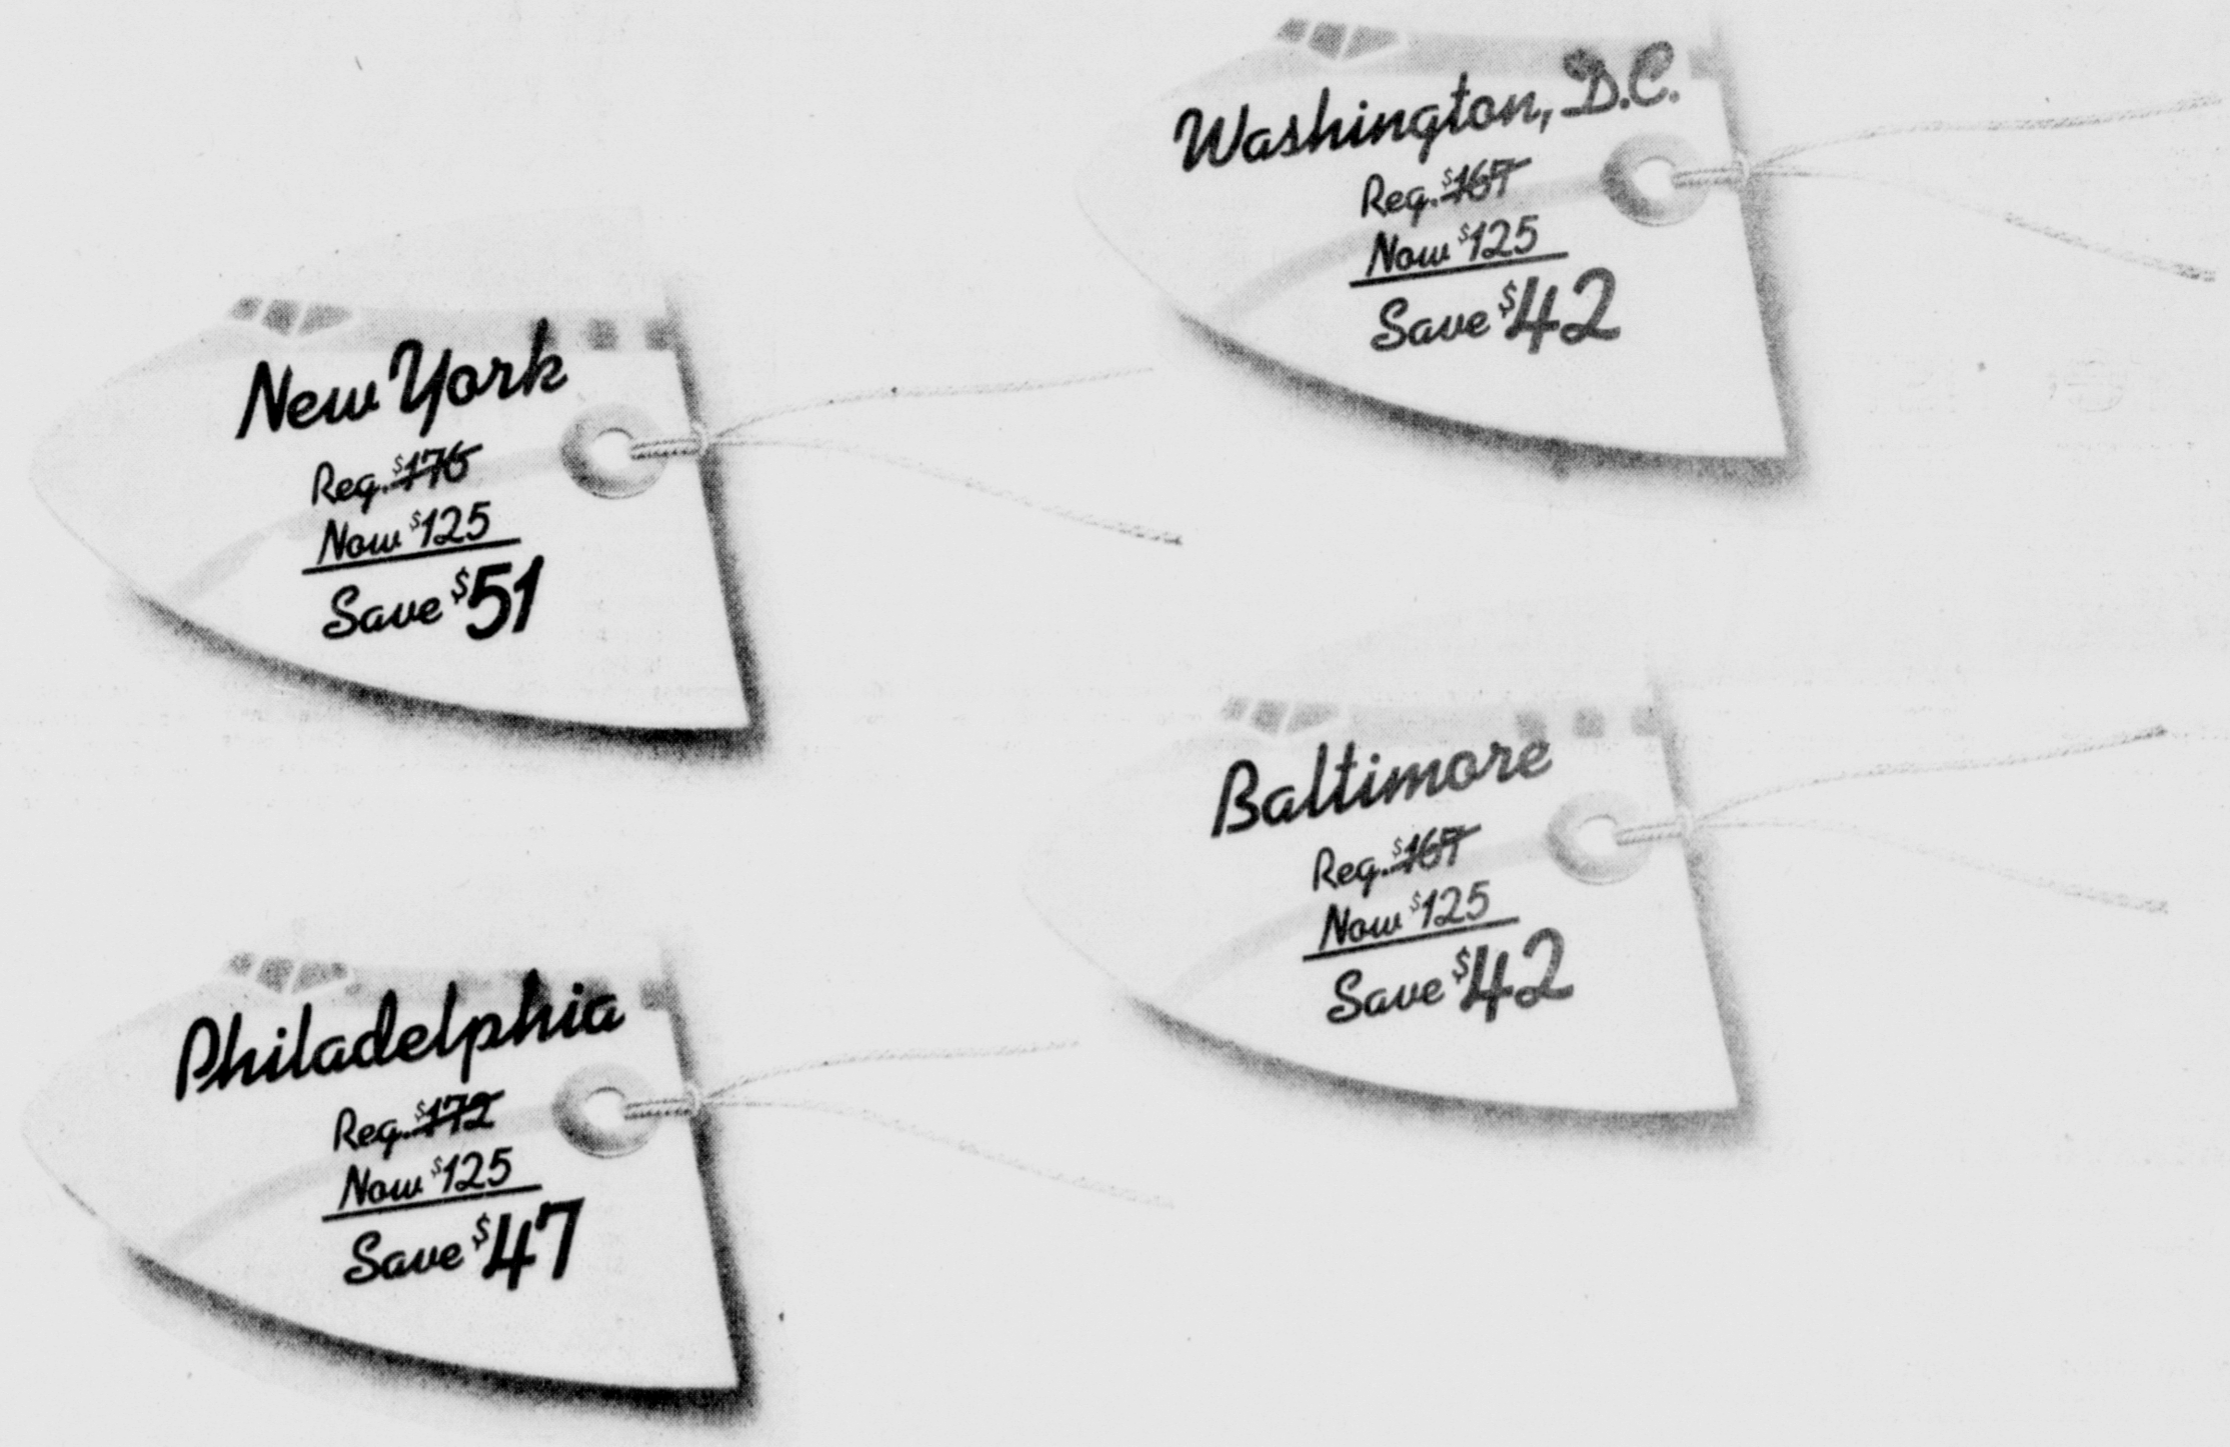

"Students in this night class might expect to see changes in their values and awareness of things after becoming involved with contemporary art forms," he explained.

The oil painting class is open to students of all levels of competency, Boyer said.

9th annual country music awards tonight at Knott's

BUENA PARK — Roger Miller hosts the ninth annual Awards of the Academy of Country Music show from Knott's Berry Farm's John Wayne Theater tonight.

The show will be aired Thursday night as a 90-minute Wide World of Entertainment special over ABC-TV, Channel 7, at 11:30 p.m.

Miller will include "Behind Closed Doors," "If We Make It Through December," "Most Beautiful Girl" and "Why Me?"

This appearance marks the entertainer's second major hosting chore, following the American Music Awards show telecast by ABC-TV in February.

Miller was the Academy of Country Music's initial recipient of the Man of the Year Award in 1965, recognizing his contributions to the field of country music as both a composer and performer. He was also voted best songwriter that year and in 1968 was honored for best single record of the year for his version of "Little Green Apples."

Donna Fargo, nominated as best female vocalist of the year, will also perform. An artist on the Dot Record label, Miss Fargo's latest album is "All About a Feeling."

Huntington will offer 'Toreadors'

HOLLYWOOD — "The Waltz of the Toreadors," the award-winning Jean Anouilh farce starring Anne Anouilh and Eli Wallach, will begin its limited engagement at the Huntington Hartford Theater on Wednesday, April 3 at 8 p.m.

The play will run through April 21. There will be a special low-priced matinee April 3 at 2:30 p.m.

The production, which was seen on Broadway earlier this season, was directed by Brian Murray and produced by The Circle In The Square Theater. William Roerick, Diana Van Der Vlis and Benjamin Masters also star in the French comedy.

Anouilh's story is about love, stormy and sweet, in a romantic bygone era. Translated from French by Lucienne Hill, the production has scenery by Clark Dunham, costumes by Jose Joseph F. Bella and lighting by Thomas Skelton.

"The Waltz of the Toreadors" at the Huntington Hartford is a Greek Theater Association, James A. Doolittle presentation. Performances are Tuesday through Saturday nights at 8:30, Sunday at 7:30 p.m. and matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2:30 p.m.

Those wishing additional information should call (213) 462-6666.

Miss Hayden will present flute recital

CLAREMONT — Catherine Hayden, Scripps College student, will present a free flute recital at 8:15 p.m. April 3 in Patterson Hall on the Scripps campus.

Miss Hayden, a junior music student, will play a flute solo, "Syrinx" by Claude Debussy. She will perform Olivier Messiaen's "Le Merle Noir" and Henri Dutilleul's "Sonatine" with piano accompanist Ebet Dudley of Scripps. Pomona College student Douglas Westberg will play the guitar with her on Jacques Ibert's "Entr'acte."

Accompanied by violinist Anne Cramer of Scripps, cellist Katy Roberts and violist Pamela Freund, both of Pomona College, Miss Hayden will perform the Mozart Flute Quartet in C Major.

Miss Hayden currently studies flute with Pomona College faculty member Roland Moritz and piano with Scripps assistant professor Audrey Grigsby.

First flutist with the Pomona College Symphony, she plays for Mass at the McAllister Center of the Claremont Colleges. She has performed in several group student recitals and for weddings and a baroque concert.

SALLY RAND, legendary fan dancer who made headlines in the 1930s by shocking and selling out the Chicago Century of Progress fair, celebrates her 70th birthday by performing in the Music Center's Pavilion April 6 at 8:30 p.m. Female impersonator Charles Pierce will be guest star on the program.

Circus has 4-day run at Shrine

LOS ANGELES — Hubert Castle's International Circus opens a nine-performance, four-day engagement at the Shrine Auditorium on Thursday.

The circus features a new lineup of artists from Europe, South America, Africa, Mexico and the United States.

The circus cast of over 300 international stars also includes the traditional clowns, equestrians, elephant and wild animal acts.

One ticket admits the circus-goer to both the circus in the Shrine Auditorium and to the giant midway in the adjoining Shrine Exposition Hall.

Persons wishing reserved seats may call (213) 748-0173.

Investing

Ways to join the gold rush

By ROGER SPEAR

Q — I am interested in investing, but don't know how to go about it. Could you give me this information and the name of a stock for a beginner? What is the smallest amount I should start with? — G.B.

A — There are many brokerage firms located in your metropolitan area. Why not check with your acquaintances or at your bank for a recommendation of one of these firms. However, any of the large retail brokers, a New York Stock Exchange member firm preferably, would be suitable.

Opening an account at the chosen firm is a simple matter, no more difficult than opening a department store charge account. An initial investment of around $1,000 would probably make a good start for you.

At this time with inflation rampant, investors have been flocking into gold mining companies. Two attractive methods of participating in the rising price of gold are through a direct investment in one of the South African gold mining companies — or through a mutual fund such as International Investors which holds shares of many such companies. The latter has been the best acting mutual fund in the last two years. Net asset value rose 58 per cent in 1972 and 93 per cent last year.

The minimum investment allowed is $1,000 and there is an 8.75 per cent load fee when the shares are bought. Thus, these shares with a net asset value of about $19.20 currently would cost around $21.00 to buy. There is no charge when the shares are redeemed.

For a direct investment in a South African mining company, shares of Kloof Gold Mines, trading over-the-counter, are recommended. In this case, you would buy the American Depository Receipts which simplify ownership. Dividends on the ADR's are paid in U.S. dollars and stock transfers are faster than with the foreign shares. The company is milling about 170,000 tons monthly, a plant which should be raised to 230,000 tons by 1981.

Q — What do you think are the prospects for recovery for Revere Copper & Brass (NYSE)? I still hold 100 shares bought in 1968 at $30. — B.L.

A — From a peak of $4.03 a share in 1966, Revere's earnings dwindled yearly, dipping $1.70 per share into the red in 1972. The company made modest progress in turning operations around last year, reporting a 43 cents-a-share profit for 1973. In view of the level of sales — $492.5 million in 1973 — there is substantial leverage for a more impressive performance this year. Assuming a very modest 2 per cent after tax profit margin — an average of 4 per cent was brought down in the 1966-1971 period — sales of that order could produce $1.75 in per share results. A profit rebound of that extent would very likely generate a significant recovery in share price. Market reaction to the strong 1973 fourth-quarter report was impressive; shares are now up 63 per cent from the December low.

The outlook for two of Revere's important markets, automobile and construction, is clouded at the present time, a factor which could jeopardize earnings recovery. Another negative is the rising price and shortage of copper, although the company has just announced a price rise in its copper and brass products to offset higher costs. On balance, I would be inclined to retain these shares for partial recovery to your buy price.

Q — We have a few shares of Photon, Inc., our one and only stock purchase. The shares are no longer listed; has the company changed names? — J.Z.

A — No, the company is still in business as Photon. The stock, however, was suspended from trading in March of 1973 by the SEC. The trading ban was partially lifted last July and although broker-dealers are not permitted to make a market in the shares, trading between private individuals is allowed. The company anticipates releasing a December 31, 1973, balance sheet and final-quarter operating figures within the next few weeks.

Ask Dr. Brothers

Afraid of women?

By DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: My sister and I used to be very close but recently we've been having a lot of brother-sister disagreements. Most of them stem from her involvement in the women's liberation movement. I'm dead set against this for many reasons but mostly because I think liberated ladies make lousy mothers. This is a special concern to me because my sister has two children and I love them very much.

I'm not married but I hope to have children of my own some day and I definitely don't want them to have a so-called modern mom. I like the old-fashioned type. My sister accuses me of being afraid of women and of having a thousand hangups about them. I think if she realized how many women I have in my life, she wouldn't say this, but, on the other hand, I can't tell her I'm a swinger because I'm sure she'd be shocked. Besides, that's not the kind of thing a man tells his sister. How can I convince her that I'm not afraid of women? — K.D.

Dear K.D.: If you're sure you're not afraid of women, is it important to convince her?

Men who overstress male and female roles usually are afraid of women even though they rarely are conscious of this anxiety. They may relect their fear in many different ways.

Dr. John Crist, a psychotherapist, believes many American men are afraid of women and that they show this by an inability to establish any continuing relationship with women. They are reluctant to commit themselves in the form of engagement, marriage, or any such responsibility. Many men remain single because they are afraid they will be unable to relate to a woman in a continuing and meaningful way. They are usually totally unaware of their own motives. Sexual exploitation and promiscuity are often used to disguise fear.

Some men feel threatened by the liberated woman partly because they misunderstand the movement. They object to giving women more freedom of choice over their own lives because they fear they will be placed in direct competition and unconsciously they believe this would destroy men. The women's liberation movement does not want or insist that all women work and compete with men. What they do want is more freedom of choice for both men and women.

Feminist-psychologist Bernice Lott, in research on child-rearing, found that the most child-oriented men tended to be enthusiastic about women's liberation, while the men who were against the movement were eager to have children, but wanted to leave the raising almost entirely to their wives.

Another study revealed that female supporters of the women's movement aspire to be independent, self-sufficient and free from external control — traits, according to the study, well-suited to raising healthy, self-confident children. Nonbelievers, on the other hand, emerged as self-protective, fearful of danger or risk, inflexible and lacking in curiosity, the least desirable characteristics for raising healthy children.

I think you might take a second deeper look at what women's lib is trying to do for men and women. It might even be more valuable to take a deeper look at yourself and try to honestly analyze some of your attitudes about women. You might find that as a result of this soul-searching, you'll eventually have a better relationship with yourself, your sister, and women, in general.

Aria and McWilliams vows said in chapel

Miss Anna Marie McWilliams and John F. Aria were married in an afternoon ceremony at the Chapel in the Wildwood, Upland.

The Rev. Lee Kirk officiated at the double-ring ceremony uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert McWilliams of Chino and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Aria of Pomona.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a lace gown with a fitted bodice, long sleeves, a high neckline and a chapel train. A pearl tiara held the bride's waist-length veil of silk illusion.

She carried a bouquet of carnations and baby's breath.

Miss Mary Ann McWilliams was maid of honor for her sister.

The groom's brother, Charles Aria, was best man.

A reception at the home of the bride followed the rites.

After a honeymoon in the Blue Jay Mountains in Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Aria will reside in Alaska.

Bed warmer cools user, who requests a refund

I ordered a "nonelectric bed warmer" through a catalogue company six weeks ago.

The company guarantees a refund for any of its merchandise "if you do not agree that you have a tremendous value for your money," provided you return the merchandise at once.

My check, including the quoted price plus postage and handling and an extra 10 cents for a "gift," was $11.77.

Five days later the merchandise arrived. The gift was a small mirror surrounded by trail framework. The framework was broken in shipment. The shipment was enclosed in a large envelope and otherwise was unprotected. The "nonelectric bed warmer" arrived intact.

The "nonelectric bed warmer" was not of the material that I had envisioned from reading the catalogue description. Two days after receiving it, I packed it and the gift carefully in a rugged box and mailed them back.

Included was my letter explaining why I was asking for a refund.

I have written twice since then asking for my refund. It has not arrived. —J.A. Claremont.

You enclosed a copy of a canceled check marked "thermal blanket." We were surprised to learn the nature of your order. A nonelectric bed warmer somehow sounded much more exciting.

After writing to the mail order house, we were told that the company's return department was behind and you probably had not had time to receive your refund.

In response to our letter, the company sent you a check with the statement, "We are certain that should Mr. S— receive two checks he will return one."

Sure enough, you did get two checks, one in answer to your letters and the other in answer to ours. You are sending one back.

City and school district will ponder recreation planning for 1974-75

POMONA — The Pomona school board and City Council will meet jointly Tuesday at 5 p.m. in the District Education Center board room to discuss the 1974-75 city recreation budget.

A second agenda item will be Sacred Heart Athletic Club's ongoing need for a permanent facility.

This year the school district, through its community service tax, provided roughly one-third or $155,965 of the city's $473,526 recreation department budget.

Members of the recreation department staff will present the new budget for review.

This will be the second time Sacred Heart Athletic Club's need for a home is discussed at a joint meeting. Currently it is housed in the gym at the District Education Center which district administrators said in February was needed for storage.

School Supt. Robert Wentz will tell school board and council members Tuesday that until such time as something concrete can be developed, the district will allow the club to continue using the gym and proceed to develop other plans for needed storage space.

At the regular 7:30 p.m. board meeting, the Garey High School varsity basketball team will be recognized for its achievements this season. The team made it to CIF playoffs.

Board members will be asked to approve some new and some revised courses to be offered in the junior highs and high schools next year. These courses have been approved by the curriculum planning committee at the school level, and by the district curriculum council. Most are to accommodate ninth grade students moving into the high schools, and to enrich curriculum for the seventh and eighth graders in the junior high schools.

They cover areas of art, foreign language, home economics, industrial arts, language arts, physical education and science.

Board members will be informed that the district was received $16,231 from the federal government to purchase reading and science materials and equipment.

Opinion

No voiceprints are alike either

For decades, fingerprinting has been a basic tool in the field of law enforcement as well as a means of identifying the victims of disasters.

Today, however, the increased use of the telephone to make bomb threats or ransom demands or to engage in other illegal activities has increased the interest of law enforcement agencies in "voiceprinting"—the identification of people by their voices.

A voiceprint is a graphic representation of the intensity and frequency of a person's voice, showing characteristics that are as unique as fingerprints to each individual and which scientists say cannot be disguised or faked, even by professional ventriloquists or mimics.

According to the "father" of voiceprinting, Lawrence G. Kersta, who developed the technique while a speech scientist with Bell Telephone Laboratories, voiceprints have been used in several dozen trials so far. Seven appellate courts and three state supreme courts have upheld them as evidence.

Interestingly enough, in the very first police application, a suspect accused of making threatening telephone calls to a family in Connecticut was proved innocent when his voiceprint was compared with those made from tape recordings of the calls.

Voiceprint identification was used to substantiate the claim of the Israeli government that it had intercepted a radiotelephone conversation between President Nasser of Egypt and King Hussein of Jordan during the 1967 Six Day War, in which Nasser asked Hussein to back his claim that U.S. and British planes had assisted the Israelis.

Voiceprinting has also been used in reconstructing unintelligible messages, says Kersta, including several from aircraft in distress.

In one case, the crash of a flight between Las Vegas and San Francisco, the deciphered message revealed that the pilot and copilot had been shot. Subsequent investigation supported the message when a gun was found in the wreckage and traced to a passenger who had lost heavily at the gambling tables and had taken out a large flight insurance policy.

More recently, voiceprints played a prominent role in Howard Hughes' refutation of Clifford Irving's purported "autobiography" of Hughes.

Voiceprinting may have applications in other areas besides criminal investigation. Research indicates it can be used in diagnosing body sounds, such as heart rhythms, and in treating speech defects.

Kersta is now a special consultant with Base Ten Systems, Inc., of Trenton, N.J., which expects to market about 100 voiceprint machines in 1974 and reach annual sales of 500 within a few years.

A 1st class dilemma

Most companies, especially those that rely heavily on the mail to conduct their businesses, are facing a "first-class dilemma" as a result of the recent 25 per cent increase in postal rates, according to a survey of several dozen companies across the nation conducted by DRI Communications Services.

The basic question is not "To mail or not to mail" but "To charge or not to charge the customer."

Some firms are already neutralizing the increases by passing them along to their customers, says Alan R. Mount, president of DRI. Others are actively trimming their mailing lists and using lightweight paper stocks.

Some are considering utilizing more third-class mail, but this is not always practical. Says an executive of a company that provides finished photographic services to professional photographers, "You can't keep a bride-to-be waiting for her wedding pictures. So we are somewhat reluctant to switch to third class."

The executive of another company, which annually mails more than five million pieces of mail, complains that "In the past, if we mailed two months in advance (by third class), many of our customers would receive the announcement of a major conference two weeks after the meeting had taken place."

As a further "vote of confidence" in the Postal Service, the DRI survey also found that more than half of the companies contacted doubted that the increased cost of postage would result in improved mail delivery.

During the New York Post Office strike a few years ago, one Wall Street firm delivered mail to its branch offices and customers by chauffeured limousine, notes Mount.

"It would almost pay companies to do it today," he says. "If they could get the gas."

Thought for today

But we exhort you, brethren, to do so more and more, to aspire to live quietly, to mind your own affairs, and to work with your hands, as we charged you; that you may command the respect of outsiders, and be dependent on nobody.—1 Thess. 4:10,11,12.

America is not a land of money but of wealth—not a land of rich people but of successful workers. There is only one thing that makes prosperity, and that is work.—Henry Ford, American Industrialist.

Senator Baker's report on CIA

WASHINGTON — For months, Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., has been piecing together evidence that the Central Intelligence Agency somehow was involved in the Watergate break-in.

Now he is preparing a detailed report, backed up with secret documents. The report will depend for explosive effect, however, more on the questions it asks than on the answers it gives.

The report will focus largely on former CIA agent E. Howard Hunt, who retired from the CIA in 1970, joined a CIA cover organization and then went on the White House payroll in July 1971. A year later, he helped plan the Watergate break-in.

In Baker's study of the CIA role in the case, he has made these tentative findings:

— Deputy CIA Director Vernon Walters' repeated claim that the CIA grew wary of Hunt and broke contact with him by Aug. 31, 1971, is false. The CIA now admits its top psychiatrist, Dr. Bernard Malloy, met secretly with Hunt on the Daniel Ellsberg case as late as Oct. 27, 1971.

— Baker has documents showing the CIA role in the Watergate coverup was far more extensive than has been revealed in public testimony.

— Baker's documents also indicate that former CIA Director Richard Helms helped place Hunt with Mullen and Co., as CIA front. Baker believes the CIA kept close tabs on Hunt even after he supposedly "retired" from the CIA.

While Hunt was working for the CIA front company, he sought out an old Bay of Pigs sidekick, Bernard Barker. The Senator suspects Hunt may have been planning exploits with Barker on behalf of the CIA. The Senator would like to prove, but cannot, that two of the exploits were the Watergate and Ellsberg psychiatrist break-ins. What Baker can show, however, is that Hunt contacted Barker in April 1971, months before going on the White House payroll.

— After Hunt went to work for the White House, he got a tip from Robert Bennett, head of the Mullen CIA cover company, that one of Bennett's ex-employees in New England had some fresh information on the Chappaquiddick episode. Hunt could have obtained from the CIA's deputy director a wig, false I.D. cards, a voice modulator, a camera, a recorder and a "safe house."

The trip to New England proved totally fruitless, leading Baker to suspect it may have been a cover for some other CIA purpose.

— Baker has received indications that Hunt was reporting indirectly to the CIA even after he had moved into the White House. The Senator suspects, for example, that the CIA may have been involved with Hunt's celebrated excursion to Denver in a ludicrous CIA wig to talk to Dita Beard. The CIA reportedly was worried whether we got the famous ITT-Dita Beard memo from the same source who gave us the ITT Chile memos implicating the CIA in a plot to block the inaugural of the late Salvador Allende.

— Baker suspects, but cannot prove, that Hunt's plan to break into the safe of Las Vegas publisher Hank Greenspun may also have had some CIA undertones. The safe contained billionaire Howard Hughes' private papers. Hughes not only was associated with the Mullen CIA front but had also employed Robert Maheu, another CIA front man.

— After the Watergate break-in was discovered, Hunt fled to California to a man identified as "Mort Jackson," who has close CIA connections, Baker has learned.

These bits of evidence have led Baker to suspect that Hunt may never have broken off his ties with the CIA, despite statements to the contrary

Libs fear court, but attack Nixon

Abraham Lincoln is not remembered for the several times he was rejected by the voters nor for the many times he was called ugly names by the newspapers. He's remembered for having held our country together against formidable forces which were trying to tear it apart.

Mr. Nixon would like to be remembered for having held the world together against formidable forces tending to tear it apart. But he has done something else altogether as important which has gone almost unnoticed by his friends, and that something else is what has evoked such unreasonable anger, hatred and vindictiveness from his enemies.

He's turning the Court around; they can't wait three more years! This right-now term of the United States Supreme Court is altering history for the next hundred years. Many Presidents will come and go. Many Congresses will come and go.

But all of them will be limited in their prerogatives by the judgment of the Justices. As surely as any excess is its own undoing, the news media which tends contemporarily to unbalance our tripartite government will have its wings clipped.

Claremont Chamber allocations

Regarding the story in the Progress-Bulletin March 20 about the increase in Claremont business license fees and the city's allocation of $17,500 a year to the Chamber of Commerce and convention bureau.

In addition to the $17,500, Claremont taxpayers should be aware that according to the published budget there is an additional $9,500 in the current Claremont budget making a total of $27,000 for the Chamber of Commerce.

The total amount of $27,000 is listed under "general government" for "advertising and promotion, Chamber of Commerce." This $27,000 is more than 20 times the $1,250 paid to the Chamber 10 years ago, although in the same period the total city budget has merely doubled. —George Gibbs, Claremont.

Speed law not enforced

This new 55 miles per hour law is a big laugh. Twice a month I drive to Los Angeles to visit my daughter. On these trips I maintain my car at slightly under the 55 limit to compensate for any error in the speedometer.

Very few cars are maintaining the 55 mile law as my car is left in the dust by the majority of the cars. Numerous articles have been published stating that the Highway Patrol will be very hard-nosed regarding the 55 limit.

However, since the law came into effect, I have yet to see just one car pulled over by a Highway Patrol vehicle. Who's kidding who? — James Buntain, Upland.

Gossip for today

Many of us who once were sighing nostalgically for the good old days are now realizing those dreams—and suddenly we are beginning to wonder whether those days were really as good as wishful thinking had painted them. We all agree, of course, that temporarily one can put up with old time family togetherness because of the gasoline shortages. But when, in order to conserve on electrical energy, one must play the piano instead of tuning in the television—and when, in order to demonstrate our good citizenship, we are asked to turn down our home heater thermostats and then start joyfully singing "There'll be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight" in order to keep warm—. Well after all, one would think, wouldn't one, that the time has come to quit putting up with the horse and buggy thinking of our duly elected government officials and start formulating plans to throw the rascals out?

Cramped Japanese thrive on tension

KAGOSHIMA, Japan — Making your way down the island chain from Tokyo to this southernmost Japanese city, you quickly come to feel the crucial thing about the Japanese: almost vibrating in the air. It is tension.

The tension is born of great numbers of people moving about in work and play with furious energy, jammed into slender corridors of flat and rolling land amid a great spread of mountains, and using the tiniest spaces for their living needs.

Once at mid-day in an office-building's deep basement garage, I saw a man in a business suit, standing between closely parked cars, flailing his arms vigorously for exercise.

In an alley just wide enough to keep her elbows from scraping adjoining buildings, an old woman in traditional Japanese attire sat sunning herself. (Cars, bicycles, motorcycles, small vans, piles of stored materials are typically fitted into the narrowest slots just off-street).

Ride a sizable cable car to the top of a volcano crater edge and you'll find the swaying vehicle packed with standees hanging onto rails overhead, as in a subway or bus.

In Tokyo and Osaka, at least, there are now three-story golf practice driving ranges, with players swinging their clubs from little cubicles like boxes at the theater.

Here in Kagoshima, I saw a man practicing his swing in a little park across from the city's only Catholic church. Two spare clubs leaned against a tree while he swung away.

Everyone knows that the Japanese, like some other cultivators of spare land, terrace their hillsides to gain more crop planting space. But it is astonishing to see terrace levels barely wide enough for a few rows of rice plants.

Yet, while most Japanese may not even realize it, generally they thrive curiously on this tension. There are reports that some from Japan who live abroad for a while, in slower-paced Western European lands as one example, sorely miss the bustling tension of their home islands.

There are exceptions, naturally. One gets the idea in Tokyo now and then that the whole population lives at the edge of nervous crackup. Suicides, well down for a time, are up again as the nation bustles about in gritty competition as the world's third largest industrial power.

But, exceptions noted, order and discipline, the discipline of the group and the organization, usually prevail. I saw a huge marching column, banners high, heading for a rally in the workers' "spring offensive" for higher wages. Orderly.

Sight-seers, threading their way through parks, and shrines and scenic marvels, trail easily together behind uniformed guide girls holding identifying flags above their heads.

Unlike in the United States, when a plane lands it isn't a signal for everyone to pop out of his seat and shove for the exit. Here, people up front rise first, while those in the rear sit patiently until it makes sense to get up and move out.

Sure, with such enormous numbers of people milling about on the streets, in the stores, at stations and airports, there is some minor jostling (the celebrated big push at the subway car door is always that very special exception). But generally the pace and the movement, though bustling, are managed with orderly ease.

Maybe the children have something to do with it. Every place you look, the tots are racing about, being lugged around in their parents' arms or on mother's back, finding fun amid the crush. The Japanese travel in whole families, from baby to grandparents. Perhaps adults can't easily snarl at each other with so many children joyfully underfoot.

It is common to say the Japanese find their release from tension in the peace of their quiet homes where old traditions tend to reign. And, of course, in their sports and other pleasures, trailing off into the night in city bright spots.

No doubt it is true in considerable part. But much of the pleasure—the traveling, the games, the night-club flurry, the active and imaginative artistic life—is tensely pursued, too.

I come back to it. I think the Japanese like tension. Here, somehow, it has become equated with living importantly, with having a fuller sense of being. Economically, they must scramble to live. But they have long since come to love the scramble.

"Take that, you dirty rotten irritating seat belt buzzer!"

Ontario's unusual hotel: ex-addicts live like family trying to kick habit

ONTARIO — An old hotel in Ontario is slowly coming back to life and quickly becoming the home of more than 40 ex-"hypes," "pillheads," and alcoholics all looking to go straight.

This family of former addicts and alcoholics is not hiding behind closed doors in dark, dingy rooms fearing police raids or narcotic busts. They are strictly "out front."

No walls or fences hide their activities, and in fact interested citizens and representatives of civic groups are invited to visit any of their business meetings, group sessions or seminars daily Monday through Saturday at the old Casa Blanca Hotel, 210 S. Fern St.

The Straight Ahead family, as the members call themselves, asks only one thing of visitors — that they not come to the hotel with a negative attitude, and simply look "straight ahead" as they are doing.

No member of the family wants to look back at the spoons, needles and bottles filled with depressants, accelerants and intoxicants that put them in a cold, sweaty hospital bed for days—"kicking."

The family moved into the hotel several months ago with the help of a National Institute of Mental Health grant administered by the West End Drug Abuse Council (WEDAC). Straight Ahead contracted with WEDAC as a stabilization and residential program for drug abusers. With $87,000 the non-profit organization, directed by John Bowler, contracted to provide 10 detoxification-stabilization beds and 30 residential beds for drug and alcohol abusers at the old hotel.

In only 2½ months every bed has been filled and three new ones have been added. More are needed. When the first members of the Straight Ahead family moved in Ontario police and local businessmen in the area cast a critical eye on the hotel, fearing difficulty with its tenants and community repercussions. Neither came. The tenants are walking the straight line—hiding nothing.

One tenant, an ex-heroin addict said, "It's hard to get out of line here. When you want to get out and get a fix—and really all you have to do is walk — everybody gets on you. They say, 'Don't go. Don't leave your family. We love you. We all love you.' Too much love here, you have just got to stay."

And stay they do. "We try our best," says Bowler, "to keep the addict here for 90 days."

The 90 days, according to Bowler, usually begins with an addict going to one of the WEDAC drop-in crisis centers in the West End. WEDAC then takes the addict to either the Pomona Psychiatric Center or Loma Linda Community Hospital after a 21-day contract is signed by the client. The contract is the client's promise to stay under the control of WEDAC for at least a 21-day period.

For seven of the eight days the client remains at the hospital to withdraw or kick the habit of using heroin or methadone or other addictive drugs. Kicking methadone is sometimes harder than kicking heroin, said one of the clients at Straight Ahead.

Shaken and weak from "kicking" and recovering from related drug abuse ailments (malnutrition, liver infections, ulcers, etc.) the client is then taken to the hotel where for seven more days he is restricted to his assigned room and the dining hall. The seven-day period is called stabilization where his or her strongest urges to "fix" are smothered.

After stabilization the client then faces 30 more days of restricted movement within the hotel complex where he or she is required to attend all counseling sessions and seminars.

In the next 30-day period the client is assigned special jobs at the hotel and is allowed to seek work outside. The client is still required to live at the hotel but may make plans to live at an apartment or home nearby. The last 30 days the client can begin working and living away from the hotel, but is urged to drop in at the hotel and attend seminars and sessions as often as is possible.

While Straight Ahead has received a number of donations and contributions from the community and the WEDAC grant, its directors are still in need of various things to keep the hotel in operation.

Bowler said the cost of the program is steadily increasing due to inflation and extra clients being referred. "We are in need of an additional $2,700 per month to keep the program operating," said Bowler, "and we must ask the community for help."

Bowler said that the program is also in desperate need of some form of transportation, kitchen utensils, coffee urns, clothing (including some children's clothing for small children living with their mothers at the hotel), all types of food, a washer-dryer, hand and face towels, musical instruments (for some of the clients who are musicians), and ironing boards.

Anyone interested in aiding Straight Ahead or needing further information may contact Bowler at 714-986-6761.

Expanded service aim of new Upland library chief

UPLAND — When Mrs. Kathleen Bernath and her husband came back to California from New York a few years ago, it was with the intention of retiring.

Her husband did, but Mrs. Bernath thought she ought to use some of the training she received at the Columbia Graduate School of Library Service.

That decision led to a six-year stint as Americana cataloguer at the Huntington Library in San Marino. When all that commuting got to be more than she bargained for, she signed on with the Upland Library as a cataloguer in 1967.

Last month, after seven years in a variety of positions, she became the library director, succeeding Charles Kaufman, who resigned to accept another position in October 1973.

A diminutive, soft-spoken woman, Mrs. Bernath doesn't look the part of head of a 35-member staff supervising the more than 75,000 holdings of the library.

But in charge she is. And she's well on her way, albeit quietly, toward broadening the services of the library and developing more community involvement in library activities.

She believes it necessary "to reach all segments of the community to find out what they would like us to do." The key to doing that, she says, is simply "more getting acquainted."

While the public relations work goes forward, she and her staff are expanding recreational and vocational material, as well as building up business-related material so that the library can broaden its service to the local business community.

In addition, she is actively continuing many of the library's currently popular programs such as informative tours for school children, twice-weekly crafts programs, story hour and film programs for youngsters, programs to bring books to senior citizens and special film programs for older library users, and the regular summer reading programs.

Even the energy crisis is being turned to advantage by Mrs. Bernath. "We've turned out a lot of lights," she said, "and plan to set up a couple of outposts in out-of-town areas stocked with paperback books" for those who might not be able to come into the library proper.

The library's operating hours remain the same as before the crisis and weekend operation will continue.

As Mrs. Bernath sums it up, "We're trying not to cut services."

House approves hot meal for elderly

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House overwhelmingly passed legislation recently aimed at providing at least one hot meal a day for needy Americans 60 and older.

Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., who introduced the legislation, said passage "is essential at a time when inflation is taking food out of the mouths of our senior citizens."

By a vote of 380-6, the House extended the nutrition for the elderly program for three years. It authorized appropriations from $104.8 million for the rest of this year to $250 million for 1977 to pay for the program.

Teachers submit list of 18 proposals to Chaffey board

ONTARIO — Eighteen proposals, including those asking for pay increases and additional health benefits, have been presented to the Chaffey Union High School District by the Associated Federation of Teachers.

Wayne Hubert, AFT membership chairman, presented the proposals to the school board, stating that the majority of the requests were not related to economics.

Economic items listed in the proposals include the increase of the Class A, Step 1 salary for the 1974-75 year to $9,694 from the 1973-74 year figure of $8,114.

Benefits requested were composite dental insurance coverage, psychiatric coverage, a death benefit, reimbursement for loss, damage or destruction of clothing or personal property that occurs while on duty or while participating in any school-sponsored activity, and personal leave with no reasons required.

Lakers win; Smith discovers offense

By DON BRADLEY
P-B Staff Writer

INGLEWOOD — Luckily for the Lakers, Elmore Smith found out he was expected to provide some offense.

The lanky center scored 37 points, his high as a Laker, Sunday night as the Lakers beat the much-improved Buffalo Braves, 150-124, to clinch the Pacific Division title and a berth in the playoffs, the 14th consecutive year they have done so.

"I didn't know I was supposed to do a lot of scoring," Smith told a surprised group of writers in the Laker dressing room. "There were a lot of times I got open (earlier in the year) but didn't get the ball. Nobody here ever asked me to score. But they look for me to shoot now."

Indeed they do.

In his last six games, the 7-1, 240-pound Smith has made 67 of 107 field goal attempts (62.6 per cent), 24 of 37 free throws (64.8 per cent), grabbed 65 defensive rebounds and 18 offensive for a total of 83, made 15 assists, scored 158 points (26.3 ave.) and blocked 28 shots.

Against Buffalo, he had 16 rebounds, five assists, and two steals in addition to blocking four shots and scoring more points than he ever has as a Laker. In Buffalo, his high was 40 points.

"All they ever told me here," he said, "was to take the shot if I had it. I'm doing the same things here I did at Buffalo. I'm not doing anything different."

Later, however, Smith did admit that he has been trying to get better position.

Incredible as it may seem, in substance what the young center claimed is true. Bill Sharman confirmed it.

"The only thing I told him," admitted Sharman, "was to take the percentage shots. We had him get down a little so that he'd be on balance."

Apparently Sharman didn't feel he had to come out and say in so many words that he wanted his young center to average 20 points if he could. He probably felt that would put too much pressure on the 24-year-old who was suddenly thrust into Wilt Chamberlain's shoes.

And Smith apparently thought that because Chamberlain concentrated on defense while with the Lakers that that was supposed to be what he (Smith) was expected to do also.

The dawn came just in time. Every-one except the players themselves counted the Lakers out of the playoffs after the back-to-back losses to Golden State a week ago.

"Things change so quickly in sports," Sharman reflected. "After those losses we closed the doors and talked things over. I told them it wasn't over yet and they accepted it and responded to pressure as well as any time I've seen in a long time."

All the Lakers did was knock off the New York Knicks, the Milwaukee Bucks, the Chicago Bulls, and now Buffalo.

Meanwhile, Golden State was reeling around like a drunk with epilepsy. The Warriors couldn't beat their grandmothers.

"This has to be one of the greatest comebacks ever," Sharman said quietly. "I'm proud of everything. The players have been playing great ball. Hustle and attitude have been the main thing."

"It's so gratifying," he continued, "to see young players like Elmore and Jimmy Price perform so well under pressure. I'm sure those early injuries (knee and broken cheekbone) held Elmore back."

Sadler fined for absence

Foreman, Norton weigh in CARACAS (UPI) — Heavyweight champion George Foreman, who has a contract in his pocket for a multi-million dollar September defense against ex-titlerholder Muhammad Ali in far away Africa, meets Ken Norton officially today when they weigh-in for Tuesday's scheduled 15-round championship fight.

Harry Schwartz, vice-president of Video Techniques, Inc., co-promoters of Tuesday's fight, said a contract was signed several weeks ago for a Foreman-Ali fight, in Kinshasha, Zaire providing Norton does not upset the champion. He said a group of Swiss businessmen, representing African interests, had guaranteed a $10 million purse for the bout.

The unbeaten Foreman was expected to weigh 220 pounds for his 40th professional fight while Norton, a 3-10-1 underdog, should come in at a career high of 213 or 214 pounds. The ceremonies were set for 12 noon EDT at the Poliedro stadium, site of the first heavyweight title fight to be held in South America.

Another fight behind closed doors also was likely.

Foreman's trainer, Dick Sadler, was fined an undisclosed amount Sunday for failing to appear before the local Boxing Commission to discuss the rules for the fight.

Sadler, however, maintains the local Commission has nothing to do with the fight which, he insists, is under the jurisdiction of the World Boxing Council and the World Boxing Association. The local people think differently. They say they have exclusive control.

Norton, who split two 12-round decisions with Ali last year, was due to Tickets for the closed-circuit TV showing of the fight are on sale at the Fox Theater in Pomona.

Tickets are priced at $10 for reserved main floor seats and $8 for unreserved balcony seats. Doors will open at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday. The title fight is scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

leave his mountain retreat of the last three days, where he went for peace and quiet.

The gate for Tuesday's fight, being telecast live to 70 countries, was expected to be in the range of $3 million. Foreman, 25, is on a $700,000 guarantee against 40 per cent of all monies, while Norton, 28, receives $200,000 or 20 per cent.

Some tickets, ranging from $14 to $140, still were available at the 15,000-seat Poliedro for the bout which will be carried live on local television.

Foreman, the 1968 Olympic gold medal winner, will be making only the second defense of the title he won 14 months ago from Joe Frazier, whom he blitzed inside two rounds on the Caribbean island of Jamaica. Joe "King" lasted less than a round last September in Tokyo.

Norton, a San Diego resident, rose to prominence just a year ago when he broke Ali's jaw in their first fight. Besides his loss to Ali in the rematch, he was knocked out by Venezuela's Jose Luis Garcia in 1970.

Ali will be on hand for the fight to do a color commentary for television. He was scheduled to arrive tonight.

Kings set mark after 7-1 victory

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Los Angeles Kings set a team record of 11 straight contests without a loss Sunday with a 7-1 victory over the cellar-dwelling California Seals.

For the hapless Seals, it was their 59th loss of the National Hockey League season.

Utah, who tallied 94 points and grabbed 72 rebounds in four games. Sojourner, whose brother Willie is a star of the New York Nets of the American Basketball Association, is a sophomore at Utah and said today he wants to graduate from college. But he admitted, "I really don't know what I'd do," if the pros come at him now with a juicy offer to turn professional.

If and when he does turn pro, Sojourner thinks his most natural position in the pros would be forward and thinks he would be able to make the switch from center easily.

For Schaus, former coach of the Uni-

N.C. State goes after national title tonight

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — To hear Marquette coach Al McGuire tell it, his team shouldn't even be allowed in the Greensboro Coliseum tonight, much less play North Carolina State for the NCAA championship.

"Marquette has been at the top now for eight years and you know for the last five we have never been out of the top 10," McGuire said as he discussed his team's first appearance ever in the finals. "I would say that this year's team is the fifth or sixth best team I've coached in the last eight years."

Marquette will square off against North Carolina State, which beat UCLA in double overtime, at 6:10 p.m., PDT in a nationally-televised match.

UCLA will play Kansas in a consolation game at 3:30 p.m. PDT, the first time since 1966 that the Bruins will not be in the championship game.

McGuire, in a press briefing Sunday, said one of the major reasons his team made it to the finals was Michigan's upset win over Notre Dame in the first round of the Midwest Regional. Marquette, now 26-4 for the year, managed to slip by Michigan, 72-70, to get to Greensboro.

"Notre Dame is definitely a better ball club than we are physically, and a lot of other things," said McGuire, dressed in bright yellow pants, a pullover sweater, tennis shoes and no socks.

McGuire, asked what his team has to do to beat North Carolina State, deadpanned, "Be very fortunate."

Wolfpack Norman Sloan wasn't falling for any of McGuire's poor-mouthing.

Sloan, whose team now is 29-1, was willing to build up Marquette's chances of upsetting the Wolfpack, even if McGuire wasn't.

"This particular ball club caught my eye in the latter stages of the season," he said. "I even picked them to come out of the Midwest Regionals."

"They are a great basketball team, they have a fine defensive team, and they have fine players."

Sloan said the very fact that Marquette is given little chance of winning the game should serve as "added inspiration" to the Warriors.

"I think they are in an enviable position."

Marquette downed Kansas, 65-51, in their Saturday semi-final which saw little offense from either club in the first half. Marquette blew a lead in the last minute and a half of the first period to go into intermission trailing by a point.

Marquette players said after the game that the fiery McGuire shook up the club in the locker room.

"I told them you either do what I want you to do or you go home," McGuire said with a smile Sunday. "One of the guys started to get undressed and go home."

McGuire said the key to tonight's game might not be North Carolina State's All-American David Thompson, 7-4 center Tom Burleson, or much-heralded Monte Towe.

"Our biggest problem is Tim Stoddard," said McGuire of the State forward who averaged 5.4 points per game during the regular season.

"He is physical and if he starts hitting the perimeter shots then we are in Tapout City and we can go home," McGuire said.

McGuire said he would probably start the game with a man-to-man defense with one person dropping off to help on Burleson when he has the ball. He noted that Sloan used a stall in the Wolfpack's game with UCLA as State attempted to work itself into position for one winning shot.

"I'm pleased that North Carolina State fans are not intolerant of delays," said McGuire, who has always claimed his team can win games if it is able to establish the tempo of play early.

Sloan said it would be all right with him if Marquette attempts to slow down the game and wished McGuire better success than he had Saturday.

"We were better off when we were going full blast out there and trying to score," Sloan said. "When we were holding the ball, we looked rather pathetic."

Sloan, while noting that it would be normal for a team to have a letdown after winning a game such as the one against UCLA, told newsmen there really wasn't any way he could help his team get mentally ready for tonight's game.

"If they are not really convinced in their own mind about what a good team Marquette is, we are in trouble, but I believe that our basketball team is well aware of the kind of basketball team Marquette is."

Sloan said Thompson, who hit for 28 points against UCLA, is suffering no ill effects from a fall in the Eastern Regionals which knocked him out and required 15 stitches to close a head wound.

"I figured that is the way it would be because David is David and he wants to play," Sloan said.

Kansas is up for UCLA game

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — It might be a detested consolation game to UCLA coach John Wooden, but Kansas Coach Ted Owens sees as one last chance for the Jayhawks to show the nation they are a good team.

Kansas, which lost a 64-51 decision to Marquette in Saturday's NCAA semi-final round, will play UCLA at 3:30 p.m. PDT prior to Marquette's championship game with top-ranked North Carolina State.

Wooden, who has described the consolation game as "for the birds," has said he will allow his seniors and starters to decide if they want to play. There are indications that All-American center Bill Walton may not play.

Owens told newsmen Sunday that he realized that all coaches have different styles but told Wooden that he hoped UCLA will field its regular starting five.

"Our players really hope that the seniors will want to play," he said. "We would prefer to play against the very best of UCLA even though we wouldn't have as good a chance to win."

Owens said his team played poorly against Marquette and that his players were disappointed in their performance in a game which saw little offense from either team in the first half.

"I think that this game does represent a challenge to us to demonstrate the type of team we are," he said.

It will be the first time since 1966 that Wooden has not taken his Bruins into the championship game. He said the decision to allow his players to make up their own minds on whether to play is nothing new.

"This has been my philosophy and, believe me, it is no different than it has ever been," he said. "It doesn't mean that we don't go out there and do the best we can, but we give the guys who haven't had much of a chance to play throughout the season a chance to play now."

The last time UCLA was in a NCAA consolation game was in 1963, a game the Bruins lost.

Wooden said he had indications from only one player, All-American Bill Walton, that he might not play.

"I hope all the players will want to play. I hope they do but I can't force them to play," he said.

Wooden said "many persons" had been attempting to persuade Walton to leave Greensboro and not play in the game. He apparently was referring to pro offers to Walton, who has already graduated from UCLA.

"He felt like not playing would give him extra time to rest his knees and back," Wooden said.

But Wooden said he still had hopes that Walton would play one final game for UCLA.

"Let me tell you that he has changed his mind often in the past," the coach said.

Wooden may be willing to let Walton have the night off, but Owens said he would definitely like to see him in the UCLA lineup.

"This places us in an awkward position," Owens said. "If we lose, people are going to say we couldn't even beat UCLA's second team. And if we win, they'll say we didn't play the real UCLA."

"You have to discipline yourself," Owens said.

One thing Purdue had to do in the final was keep its poise when it trailed Utah 46-41 at halftime. After that, Schaus said, Utah which "had been shooting awfully well in the first half began to miss" and Purdue switched its defense against Burden, the tournament scoring champion. In the second half Schaus assigned three players to guard Burden at different times.

"We tried to keep him from getting the ball and when he did get it we just called in more defense to help out," Schaus said.

The score was tied a 76-74 with less than five minutes to play when Purdue went on an unbroken seven-point spree for a lead which Utah never seriously menaced the rest of the way. Burden had 27 points and Sojourner 23, plus 19 rebounds, for Utah. Frank Kendrick had 25 points, 14 of them in the second half, to lead Purdue.

A clue to Purdue's poise is the fact that the Boilermakers had only 11 turnovers in the game, to 23 for Utah.

Utah's 392 points in four games set an N. I. T. record, breaking the mark of 354 set by St. Bonaventure in 1960.

Purdue becomes first Big Ten team to win NIT

NEW YORK (UPI) — Back on New Year's Day, the Purdue Boilermakers weren't exactly happy about the way 1974 was getting underway. But now, as the first Big Ten team ever to win the National Invitation basketball tournament, they figure their troubles then were a blessing in disguise.

It was in Salt Lake City on Jan. 1 that Purdue lost an 87-85 decision to Utah on a last-second basket by Utes' scoring ace Tickey Burden.

"It was a tough loss and there were some unusual calls," is the way Purdue coach Fred Schaus recalls that night. But things came full circle Sunday afternoon at Madison Square Garden when the two teams met again in the NIT finals —and Purdue won, 87-81, for the championship.

"I'm glad we met Utah in the final because knowing them gave us an edge," said Schaus, whose Boilermakers finished third in the Big Ten this season, then came to New York, eliminated tournament favorite North Carolina in the first round of three N.I.T. and rolled through three more wins to the title.

One thing Purdue did not win —the "Most Valuable Player" Award, which went to 6-8 center Mike Sojourner of Utah, who tallied 94 points and grabbed 72 rebounds in four games.

Sojourner, whose brother Willie is a star of the New York Nets of the American Basketball Association, is a sophomore at Utah and said today he wants to graduate from college. But he admitted, "I really don't know what I'd do," if the pros come at him now with a juicy offer to turn professional.

If and when he does turn pro, Sojourner thinks his most natural position in the pros would be forward and thinks he would be able to make the switch from center easily.

For Schaus, former coach of the University of West Virginia and later coach and general manager of the Los Angeles Lakers of the National Basketball Association, the N. I. T. triumph represented a huge personal achievement.

"I've been coaching for 15 or 16 years in the colleges and in the pros," he said. "I've been in the playoffs many times, but until this time I never had won the big game."

Schaus praised his players for their "willingness to sacrifice" to achieve their goals this season.

"If you want something badly, you have to sacrifice to get it," Schaus

Montclair being overlooked in SAL

By CRAIG TRAVIS
P-B Staff Writer

Everybody has been talking about Upland, Damien, Claremont and Chino when it comes to pre-season predictions as to who the San Antonio League contenders would be. And justifiably so since they're all having fine campaigns.

But wait . . . somebody has been overlooked!

The Montclair Cavaliers, coached by Tom McFadden, are currently 6-3 on the year and are tied for the SAL lead with Upland, both having posted 2-0 slates.

The Cavs may possess one of the better hitting teams in the league and have four young arms, all juniors, to choose from.

Montclair will get a tough test Tuesday when it hosts two-time defending SAL champion Claremont (1-1) in a 3:15 p.m. game. Other matchups will find Pomona (1-1) at Chino (1-1), Damien (1-1) at Upland (2-0) and Ganesha (0-2) at Garey (0-2).

"I think we're a contender," said Montclair skipper Tom McFadden. "I think we're at least equal to everybody if the league. It's just a matter of who gets the breaks."

"It's a more competitive league than last year," continued the second year skipper. "And I think we're one of the better hitting teams in the league. We don't have any soft touches in the lineup. Everybody can hurt you."

The power in Montclair's offensive assault is supplied by third baseman Mike Pittman, who blasted a home run and double in the 8-6 win over Pomona last Tuesday, and catcher Gary Baker who has batted over .600 in the last seven games.

But the most consistent hitters have been Pat Proulx, Mike Medeiros and Brent Jetton.

McFadden said the pitching isn't especially strong but if there's a weakness in the league it's pitching. "There doesn't appear to be any one pitcher that will dominate the league like there's been in the past."

The Cavs' top hurler is lefthander Mike Medeiros. The 6-0 junior is currently 2-1 on the season and 1-0 in league. Brent Jetton is the No. 2 pitcher, relying on control and off speed pitches, with Reece Snapp and Mark Gossweiler ready to step into the starting rotation.

"Medeiros is comparable with any pitcher in the league," stated McFadden. He's surprisingly fast and very deceptive. He doesn't appear to be throwing real hard — but he does."

When Medeiros isn't on the mound he patrols the Cavalier outfield.

"Like all of our pitchers, Mike hasn't quite come around yet because of basketball but he's very competitive. He'll be ready," continued McFadden. "He got two key hits against Pomona."

Montclair will not be taken lightly by anyone and has shown to be a contender but McFadden concluded saying, "Damien is the team to beat, but Claremont, Upland and Chino have been showing something. However I don't think anyone can run away with it."

Scanning the valley, Bonita visits Ontario, Sierra Vista is at San Dimas and Royal Oak travels to Walnut in 3:15 p.m. Hacienda League action.

Cale had a better idea

ATLANTA (UPI) — David Pearson had all the power, but Cale Yarborough is $26,950 richer today because he found the best way to drive the Atlanta International Raceway.

That way, said Cale, is only a few feet from the outside wall at speeds nearing 150 miles per hour.

Yarborough powered to a surprisingly easy victory of nearly a half-minute over Pearson in the $113,500 Atlanta 500 stock car race Sunday. It was victory number three of the season for Yarborough in his Junior Johnson-prepared Chevrolet.

"I have never run harder," said the popular Timmons-ville, S.C., driver, who added that he got more revolutions out of his engine by driving high on the 1.5-mile speedway.

Pearson, who picked up $10,150 for his second place finish, was the heavy pre-race favorite in his Woods Brothers Mercury. He took the green flag in the pole position, aiming for his second victory in a row in this race.

But Yarborough's tactics and a little luck late in the race, left the rest of the field so far behind that only Pearson finished in the same lap.

Another lap back in third place was George Follmer in a Ford, who ran out of gas on the last lap but was voted the rookie of the race by sportswriters.

Buddy Baker was fourth in a Dodge and Donnie Allison fifth in a Chevrolet.

Yarborough, who had predicted before the race that Pearson was the man to beat since his was the most powerful car and had qualified at five mph faster than Yarborough, took the lead for good with 83 miles to go.

Shortly after Yarborough took the lead, Pearson pitted in hopes of making a late run at the leader. But Yarborough was able to pit a few laps later under a caution after Carl Adams spun out in his Ford and the caution flag came out.

Yarborough's race speed of 139.910 mph was far below the record average of 140.701 mph he set here in winning in 1970. It was the fourth time Yarborough has won this race.

Tardif's 4 goals lead Sharks to 6-3 victory

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Marc Tardif, scoring four goals, led the Los Angeles Sharks to a 6-3 victory over the Winnipeg Jets in World Hockey Association play Sunday.

Tardif's first goal came when he took a rebound shot in front of the net from Brian McDonald to give the Sharks a 1-0 lead at the end of the first period.

Coming right back, he tipped in another McDonald shot from the left circle at 2:27 of the second period. Teammate Bobby Whitlock notched his 19th score of the year 18 seconds later with assists from McDonald and Tardif.

Winnipeg's Cal Swenson put the Jets into the game with his fifth goal of the season, but the Sharks kept a three-point advantage when Steve Sutherland skated between two defensemen and drove the puck home for a 4-1 lead.

Tardif roared back in the third period to score his final two goals at 2:18 and then 34 seconds later.

Winnipeg managed two goals in the final period by Dan Spring and Ron Snell.

But even with the loss, Winnipeg is assured of a playoff berth, 16 points ahead of fifth place Vancouver. As for the Sharks, they remained mired in the WHA West cellar.

Los Angeles begins a four-game road trip starting in Quebec Wednesday and plays its final home game April 4.

Reds' Nolan no longer embarrassed

By United Press International

A few weeks ago, Gary Nolan said he was embarrassed to come out to the ball park. "I felt like I was in the middle of the Ohio River in a boat with a hole in it," groused Cincinnati's big-armed righthander.

Now, suddenly, things have changed. Nolan may have plugged that hole in the boat. He's showing unmistakable signs of not being up river without a paddle anymore.

The Reds Sunday sent out two squads, one of them knocking over the New York Mets, 10-8, in Tampa, Fla., and the other dropping a 5-2 decision to the St. Louis Cardinals at St. Petersburg, but Nolan was the big news and he didn't even take part in either game. In fact he hasn't pitched a single inning in actual competition all spring, but that doesn't mean he hasn't been working.

Nolan, on the disabled list practically all last year, asked Larry Shepard, the Reds' pitching coach, to catch him last Thursday.

"It was the first time this spring that he threw the ball where it landed in my hands without coming in on an arc," said Shepard.

Nolan threw to Shepard again on Saturday.

"He threw so hard, I couldn't handle him, so I turned him over to (John) Bench," said the Reds' coach. "He wasn't only throwing fast balls, but hard curves, changeups and everything."

Bench also was impressed.

"Gary's fast ball is back to about three-quarters what it used to be," said the Reds' receiver.

That in itself is enough to get the entire Cincinnati ball club excited. Gary Nolan, even three-quarters as fast as he used to be, still makes a formidable addition to the Reds' staff.

Nolan, 25, used to specialize in little aspirin tablets. That's what the ball looked like in 1967, his rookie year. He had a 14-8 record that season, striking out 15 batters in seven innings in a game with San Francisco that year. Nolan struck out Willie Mays four times in that contest. He was 18-7 in 1970 and 15-5 in 1972 before running into arm trouble.

Now it looks as if he could be coming back, and if he does, the Reds automatically become even stronger favorites to repeat in the National League West.

They rallied for seven runs in the eighth inning in their game with the Mets Sunday for a 10-8 victory. Tony Perez' double was the big blow in the inning.

The Reds' second squad was beaten by the Cardinals, 5-2, with Clay Kirby giving up four of the Cards' runs in the sixth innings he worked. Jose Cruz, continuing his spirited for St. Louis.

Yankees 2 White Sox 1
Steve Kline and Scott McGregor snapped a four game losing slide for the Yankees with a combined four hit 2-1 conquest of the White Sox. Reliever Stan Perzanowski wild pitched the winning run across in the seventh.

Royals 7 Tigers 2
The Kansas City Royals jumped on lefthander Mickey Lolich for six runs in six innings to beat the Detroit Tigers, 7-2. Amos Otis and Fran Healy each doubled home two runs, with Steve Busby allowing two runs on five hits over six innings to get the victory.

Red Sox 6 Twins 4
Tommy Harper's two-run single capped a five-run sixth inning rally that gave the Boston Red Sox a 6-4 triumph over the Minnesota Twins. Rick Wise was the winner although he gave up homers to Steve Braun, Bobby Darwin and Eric Soderholm.

Pirates 7 Phillies 2
Richie Zisk hit a pair of homers and Bob Robertson one in Pittsburgh's 7-2 win over Philadelphia. Mike Anderson connected for the Phillies. Jim Rooker went the first five innings for Pittsburgh, yielded one unearned run and was the winner.

Orioles 8 Braves 1
Andy Etchebarren's single with the bases loaded unraveled a 1-all tie in the seventh and the Baltimore Orioles added five more runs in the eighth to crush the Atlanta Braves, 8-1. Doug DeCinces had a solo home run for the Orioles.

Rangers 3 Expos 2
Tim Foli's eighth error in 10 games enabled the Texas Rangers to register a 3-2 decision over the Montreal Expos. The loss was the sixth in a row for the Expos who haven't looked like the same ball club since their trip to Puerto Rico last week for a pair of exhibition games. Jim Sundberg walked with one out in the 15th and Frank Bolick, the winning pitcher, hit a double play ball to Foli. The shortstop let the ball go through his legs and Mike Kubbage then singled home Sundberg.

Padres 2 Athletics 0
Bill Greif, Rich Troedson and Vicente Romo combined to pitch San Diego to a five hit 2-0 victory over Oakland. Clarence Gaston singled home the Padres' first run off loser Ken Holtzman in the first inning and also their second one with an infield out in the fifth.

Cubs 5 Giants 4
The Cubs came up with three runs in the fifth off Jim Barr for a 5-4 win over the Giants. Julio Morales' double was the key blow during the rally. Milt Pappas was the winner and Barr the loser. Ed Goodson, San Francisco first baseman, suffered a hamstring pull in his left leg and is expected to be out a week.

Righthanders Dick Tidrow and Cecil Upshaw pitched Cleveland to a 9-4 victory over the University of Arizona.

TV showing of fight goes to court

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Legal arguments which could determine whether the George Foreman-Ken Norton heavyweight title fight is viewed at 200 closed circuit television locations in North America will be heard Monday in federal court.

K.O. Inc., a Nevada corporation headed by Loren Cassina, is seeking a preliminary injunction in a breach of contract suit. The suit is against Foreman, his manager and trainer Charles Sadler, the champion's financial and business manager Leroy Jackson, and several corporations.

Attorney Robert Reid, representing Cassina, says U.S. District Judge Roger D. Foley set arguments for 1:30 p.m. Monday to determine whether to grant a preliminary injunction. The federal court hearing is scheduled about 30 hours before Foreman and Norton step into the ring in Caracas, Venezuela, on Tuesday night.

The legal action is directed at blocking the closed circuit television, not the 15-round boxing match itself.

K.O. Inc. is seeking $2.5 million in damages on grounds it has a five-year exclusive contract for all ancillary rights to Foreman fights. The contract, signed by Sadler, was dated Jan. 9, 1971, about one year before Foreman became heavyweight champion.

If Cassina were granted his motion for a preliminary injunction, it could, in effect, suspect all ancillary agreements, covering closed circuit television, for example, until the breach of contract suit were settled.

"We regard the K.O. Inc. George Foreman exclusive ancillary contract as the most valuable contract in the entertainment world today," Cassina said. "We have an investment of time, effort and expertise which we wish to protect."

Foreman, a 3-1 favorite over Norton in the Tuesday match, won the heavyweight title from Joe Frazier Jan. 22, 1973. His first defense of the title was Aug. 31, 1973, in Tokyo against Joe (King) Roman. And a Foreman-Muhammad Ali fight appears to be set for Kinshasa, Zaire, (formerly known as Leopoldville) for this September if Foreman defeats Norton.

Video Techniques Inc., a

New York company, handled the ancillary rights in the Foreman-Frazier fight and is handling them for Tuesday night. Harry Schwartz, vice president of Bideo Techniques Inc., said Sunday a group of Swiss businessmen were guaranteeing the Ali fight.

The K.O. Inc. suit said the Nevada corporation had a five-year contract with Foreman which expires in 1975 and that the boxer gave exclusive television, radio and film rights together with all other ancillary rights of each boxing contest to the company during the years 1971 through 1975.

The legal action filed Friday also asks that money derived by Foreman, while under contract with K.O. Inc., be frozen and that negotiations on future fights with other companies be blocked by the court unless the profits are placed into an escrow account.
